"Meaningless Information"

In the "information age" people are putting more & more credence in what I would call "Meaningless Information." My brain is only so big--I can't know everything! I personally don't care how many people are injured each year by toilet seats or that Betsy Ross had three nipples. Some people may find that meaningful but for me, it's psychological clutter like seeing my brother on his first birthday walking around with a pretzel, a spoon, and a confused look on his face.

For every new piece of "Meaningless Information" that I learn, a piece of valuable information leaves. So, while some people are stuck trying to find out everything, I say, give up already! You'll never be able to know everything, and some things are just "Meaningless Information" that you'll never need!

But wait a minute, now that I think about it, my brother with a spoon & pretzel is cool--it carries all kinds of meaning for me. Maybe there really is no such thing as "Meaningless Information" after all! Everything has meaning to someone. In fact, you might learn something very useful and interesting. For example, the population of Arkansas in 1880 was 802,525 people. I guess I'm really just trying to say: One can acquire everything in solitude--except character.

—Kabara

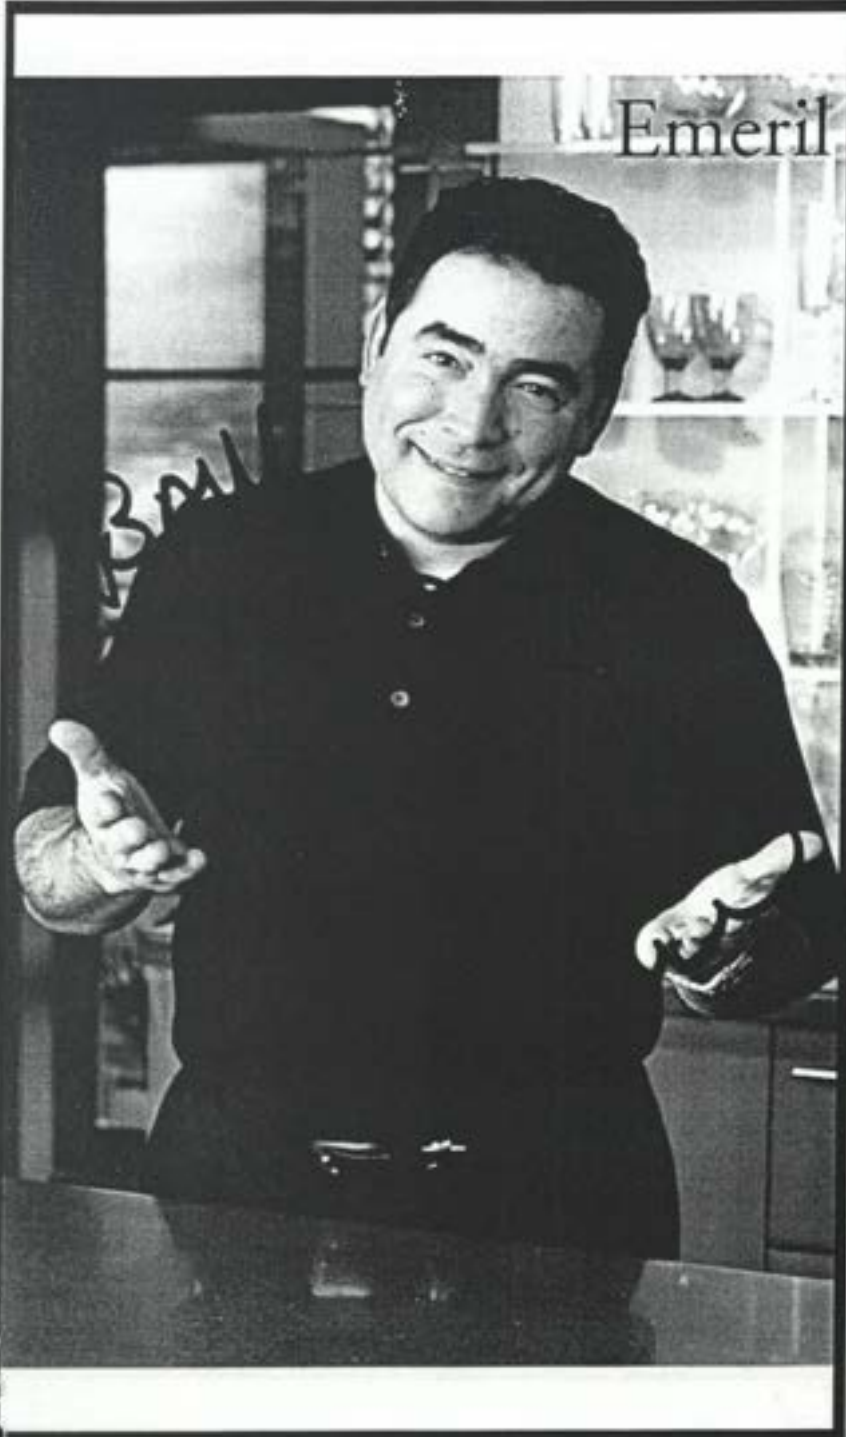

introduction:

So, what you're holding here is a book, primarily of kids, a year older than last year and, as time passes, unbelievably young. Pages were designed (mostly) by the kids themselves with Ruby & Josh helping to bring their ideas alive. The same Ruby and Josh supplied the thirty "meaningless information" pages. Bianca & Rami took most of the pictures. Julia and Briana handled the senior section complete with non-digital cameras and real film processing. Grievances concerning the Gizzard should be directed to Kabara, Kellyn & Nile. Celebrity choices, the book's shape, theme, cover, sticker, et cetera, were made by the entire yearbook staff. Gayle & Tim helped with the youngest kids. Gina helped the first and second graders. Shane kept the computers from blowing up. Camellia helped put it all together.

Composition of Air: Nitrogen 78.084%, Oxygen 20.947%, Argon 0.934%, Carbon Dioxide 0.033%, Neon 18.2 parts per million, Helium 5.2 parts per million, Krypton 1.1 parts per million, Sulfur dioxide 1.0 parts per million, Methane 2.0 parts per million, Hydrogen 0.5 parts per million, Nitrous Oxide 0.5 parts per million, Xenon 0.09 parts per million, Ozone 0.07 parts per million, Nitrogen dioxide 0.02 parts per million, Iodine 0.01 parts per million, Carbon monoxide trace, Anmonia trace. Can I stop breathing now?

The human body is composed of: 96.2% of body weight comes from "organic elements" present in many different forms. DNA, RNA proteins, lipids and sugars are all composed of primarily O, C, H and N. Also, Water (H₂O) and carbon dioxide (CO₂) as well as other small molecules involve these elements. Oxygen (65.0%) Carbon (18.5%) Hydrogen (9.5%) Nitrogen (3.2%). 3.9% of body weight comes from elements present in the form of salts. Don't be fooled by their minute quantities, they are very important for the maintenance of homeostasis (meaning "well balanced organism"). Calcium is a major component of bones and teeth. Iron is necessary for oxygen transport by red blood cells. Sulfur is present in most proteins and potassium keeps your heart beating smoothly and regularly. Calcium (1.5%), Phosphorus (1.0%), Potassium (0.4%), Sulfur (0.3%), Sodium (0.2%), Chlorine (0.2%), Magnesium (0.1%), Iodine (0.1%), Iron (0.1%). The trace elements compose less than 0.5% of total body weight but then again, they are essential for homeostasis. Some of these elements are cofactors of critical enzymes in the body (meaning that without them, the enzyme cannot work at all and that even low concentrations of them can make the enzyme work very well.) Chromium (trace), Cobalt (trace), Copper (trace), Fluorine (trace), Manganese (trace), Molybdenum (trace), Selenium (trace), Tin (trace), Vanadium (trace), Zinc (trace). Are you the sum of your parts? What's the point?

Dry wood is primarily composed of cellulose, lignin, hemicelluloses, and minor amounts (5% to 10%) of extraneous materials. Cellulose, the major component, constitutes approximately 50% of wood substance by weight. It is a high-molecular-weight linear polymer consisting of chains of 1 to more than 4 b-linked glucose monomers.

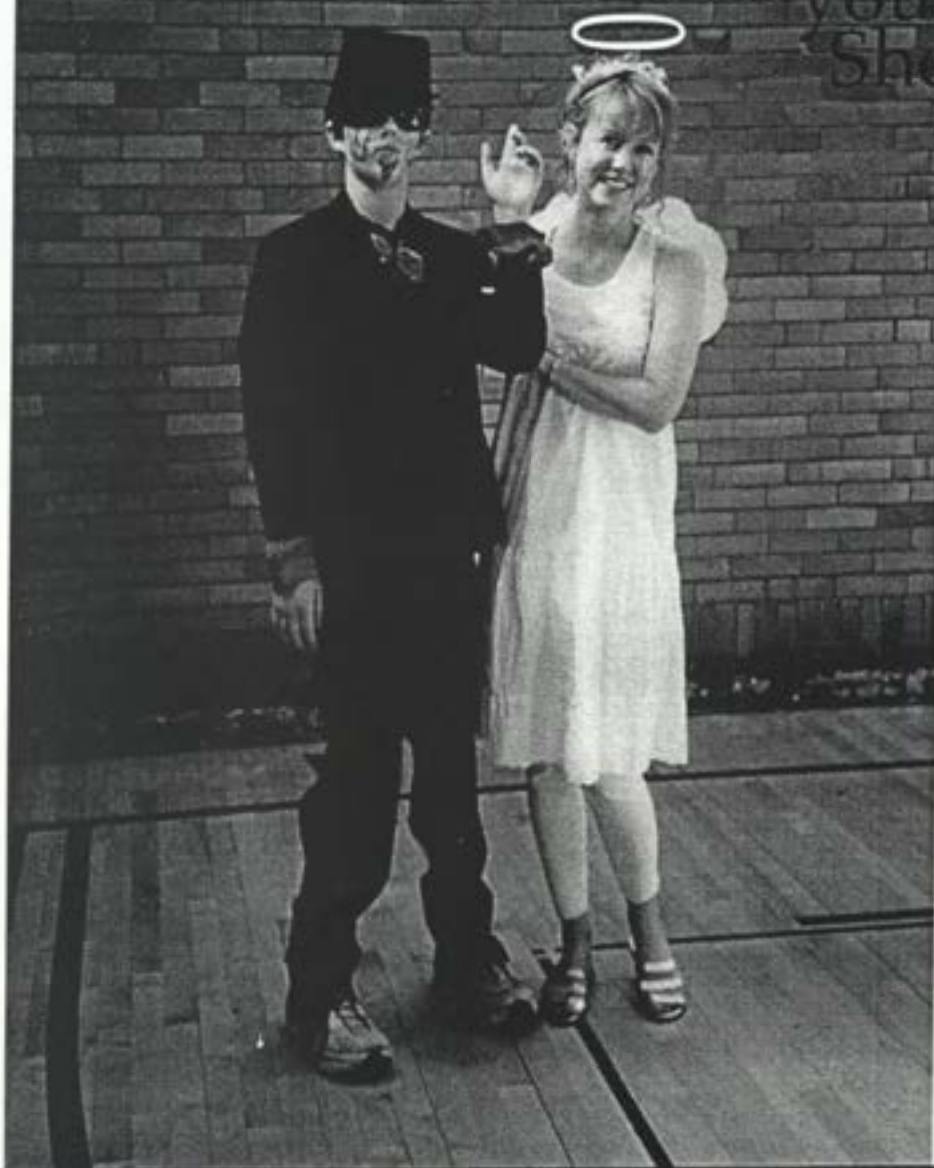

Unscramble the coded message contained on this page and win a valuable prize.

Lignin constitutes 23% to 33% of the wood substance in softwoods and 16% to 25% in hardwoods. Although lignin occurs in wood throughout the cell wall, it is concentrated toward the outside of the cells and between cells. Lignin is often called the cementing agent that binds individual cells together. Lignin is a three-dimensional phenylpropanol polymer, and its structure and distribution in wood are still not fully understood. On a commercial scale, it is necessary to remove lignin from wood to make high-grade paper or other paper products.

Wooden structure: In some species, such as the ashes, hickories, and oaks, the pores (vessels) become plugged to a greater or lesser extent with ingrowths known as tyloses. Heartwood in which the pores are tightly plugged by tyloses, as in white oak, is suitable for tight cooage, because the tyloses prevent the passage of liquid through the pores. Tyloses also make impregnation of the wood with liquid preservatives difficult. Tyloses, schmyloses, just pass the maple syrup.

Dry leaves, chemical composition: Protein (crude) = 3.1% (dry). Fat = 0.5% (dry). Fibre (crude) = 9.2% (dry). Ash (insoluble) = 5.8% (dry). Carbohydrate (soluble): Starch = 15.3% (dry). Sucrose = 19.3% (dry). D-glucose = 0.6% (dry). D-fructose = 5.6% (dry). Amino acids (g [16g N]-1): Aspartic acid = 9.8g. Threonine = 5.2g. Serine = 5.9g. Glutamic acid = 10.1g. Proline = 7.5g. Glycine = 5.5g. Alanine = 5.2g. Valine = 5.2g. Cysteine = 1.3g. Methionine = 1.3g. Isoleucine = 4.2g. Leucine = 6.8g. Tyrosine = 3.3g. Phenylalanine = 4.2g. Lysine = 4.6g. Histidine = 1.6g. Arginine = 4.6g. Minerals: Sulphur = 0.13% (dry). Potassium = 0.06% (dry). Magnesium = 0.14% (dry). Calcium = 0.36% (dry). Na = 0.01% (dry). K = 2.57% (dry). Zinc = 13mg/kg -1 (dry). Iron = 17mg/kg-1 (dry). Manganese = 8mg/kg-1 (dry). Copper = 8mg/kg-1 (dry). Aluminum = 10mg/kg-1 (dry). To summarize, for a standard 2,200 calorie daily diet, a 1.5 kilogram serving of dry leaves contains your complete recommended daily allowance of vitamins, minerals and essential amino acids with the added benefit of 320% of the RDA of soluble and insoluble fibers.

Standardized tests do not reflect what we know about how students learn. They are based in behaviorist psychological theories from the nineteenth century. While our understanding of the brain and how people learn and think has progressed enormously, tests have remained the same. Behaviorism assumed that knowledge could be broken into separate bits and that people learned by passively absorbing these bits. Today, cognitive and developmental psychologists understand that knowledge is not separable bits and that people (including children) learn by connecting what they already know with what they are trying to learn. If they cannot actively make meaning out of what they are doing, they do not learn or remember. But most standardized tests do not incorporate the modern theories and are still based on recall of isolated facts and narrow skills.

Student Vows to Defeat Satan During Social Action Day

A first grader made a personal commitment to "defeat Satan and save the Earth." Said student plans to begin this quest by purging the high school of all D & D players, Harry Potter readers, and Student Solidarity Members. Apparently, many younger students feel Student Solidarity members are closely allied with Satan because of their bad haircuts and their recurring call for goat sacrifices.....

Gina's 4th Period Linked to Enron Scandal

A few weeks ago the "In Harmony" writing team made a shocking discovery. It all started when Kellyn Bartlett began researching the Enron scandal for an article. At first she just noticed small coincidences between Gina's 4th period class and Enron. For instance, after the class made a field trip to Washington, D.C. for some "money transferring," every student received a new car with the logo stamped on the side. It soon became obvious, when.....

Tom's Head: Spaces Available from Now until September

"It's a simple matter of economics," said Tom Hastings in response to why he sublets parts of his brain to other people. "Hey, you only use 10% of it anyway, so I started to advertise on the internet. Within hours, I had received emails from Ellen, Isso, and some mechanic. I set up an interview with each of them and decided they were all worthy of my Hypothalamus Diencephalon."

New Starbucks Opens in Computer Room

When Starbucks discovered that Sallyann Murphey was making 37 gallons of cappuccino a day, they saw a business opportunity. They immediately began plans to open a Starbucks accross from her room in the Computer Room. "It was a simple business decision," said Starbuck spokesperson Rami Lazarus, "and consistent with our goal of offering people a real choice." When Robin Larsen heard about this, he chained himself to the door and wouldn't allow anyone inside. Luckily.....

Eric Lyakhovetsky Announces Plan to Stand in Hallway, Yell at People

"The idea just kind of blossomed. I mean after my grad project was finished, I didn't have much else to do. I sat around the house for days, weeks, just thinking. After I pulled out of it, it came to me: I would go back to basics and do what I had been so good at for four years--standing in the hallway and yelling at people." This won't be the same old thing for Eric though. He has a new & improved approach. "After I yell at them, I'll have them evaluate me on my arrogance, presentation, and how degraded I made them feel," he explained. "I have so many new things to yell," he added. There will be 'Hey Joel, I had a nightmare last night that I was you,' and 'You just got Joel-ed' and my personal favorite 'Shut up, Joel.'" Feedback for Eric's plan has been mostly positive; from everyone, that is, except Joel.

Earth Day Parade turns into Earth Day Brawl

A brawl erupted when marchers took a wrong turn into a pro-Palestinian demonstration Saturday. Confused shouts of "Out of the West Bank!" and "Save the trees!" could be heard coming over the din of the riot. Harmony's perpetual bubble-blowing machine seemed to only exacerbate the problem, leaving the demonstrators soapy and foaming at the mouth.

Mysterious, Shaggy, Blonde, Coated Creature Spotted Near Jack's Locker

High School: Naptime Good Preschool: Naptime Bad

Every Preschooler knows that naptime is no good. You don't need to rest, you need to play with your friends, and eat snacks. Conversely, every highschooler knows that naptime is good. Who cares about people when you're tired and need sleep? However, teachers across America seem to be mixing up the two age groups' needs. Preschoolers are forced to have a naptime, and poor highschoolers go all day with no sleepy-resting-time. I have come up with a simple solution to this problem. When you begin school you should be given a set number of naptimes. You'll have these naptimes to use as needed throughout your school career. If you never use any in preschool, good for you, you'll have them for later on in life. Not only would this better fit students' needs, but it would also help them to learn how to manage and save for things they may want later on.

Kindergartner Found to be Shallow, Selfish

"Some things you just have to see to believe," said Teal Larsen, a student in Tom Hastings' Depth Psychology class. Her study is being released later this month, and she has had a flood of criticism and support. Her report is ground breaking in the field of kindergarten psychology; kindergartners are shallow and, consequently, selfish. Many parents are up in arms following the release of this report. "My daughter is not selfish. My daughter is a princess!" said one outraged parent who vowed to "call her daddy" and "not invite you to her birthday party." "I know it's hard to take, I mean, I really had

Cleveland Trip a Success

"Well, I'm not exactly a geography whiz, but I thought for sure that we didn't have to travel through Illinois to get to Cleveland. But when I saw the Arch, I knew we had come the right way," said middle schooler Rachel Wedig. Following in the great tradition of Spring Trips, the middle school decided that Cleveland would be an ideal destination. Other than the world-famous Cleveland Arch, they also attended a Cleveland Cardinals baseball game, and spent an afternoon at the zoo. More athletic students also enjoyed canoeing across Lake Erie, while the rest spent a relaxing afternoon at the Missouri State Museum of Cleveland, Ohio.

Harmony School Receives $3000 Grant For Things That Are Green

Harmony School applied for a record number of federally and privately funded grants this year. The good news is already rolling in. They received the much-coveted "Things That Are Green" grant from the Carnegie Foundation. This grant provides $3000 for the purchase of green things. "From green jeans to green beans," an excited Roc boasted, "any green thing the school needs, this grant will cover!" Lesser-known grants include $500 for customizable Wheat Thin boxes; $13 to renovate the school's failing computer systems; $500 to re-stock the Melba toast in the school food bank; and $1000 to purchase newer back-issues of National Geographic.

Teal's gum-wrapper chain misses world record by a mere 6.5 miles

The disappointment was clearly evident on Teal Larsen's face when told that her gum-wrapper chain missed the world record by 6.5 miles. "Can you believe some * started building his in 1968, and it now weighs 4.5 tons. I'm competing with a psycho, a moron!" But, not one to give up so easily, Teal has a new plan. "I'll make the world's longest gummi-worm chain!"

"The still point,
where time slows to a stop where uncertainty
is the only constant,
it is here at the crux
that we define ourselves and our true character is revealed"
