HARMONY SCHOOL HISTORY as recalled by Steve Bonchek

When I was probably about fourteen or fifteen years old an uncle that I really respected showed me a book; it was the history of my family. It was actually written in Yiddish. (Yiddish is a language which is a mixture of Hebrew and German. I can't read it. I know some words in it.) He was showing me this book and he only chose to read me one part of the book, just about three paragraphs, but the paragraphs were all about my great great grandfather and great grandfather starting schools in Poland. And the parts that stuck in my mind were, number one, that they started schools, and number two, that they were accessible to poor people regardless of their ability to pay. Somehow that literally stuck in my mind from the time that I was fourteen or fifteen. And since then the book has actually been translated to English and I've been able to read the parts that he chose to read to me. It was interesting because he could have read other parts of the book to me that would have left me with a totally different impression. For whatever reason this uncle of mine chose to read me these particular parts about schools and really put this idea into my mind.

From reading the English translation I found out my great great grandfather actually ran a pretty traditional school from the 1850's to 1880's in Poland. The school was for wealthy children who wanted to move on to the higher level of Jewish education which were and still are called "Yeshivas." But his son, my great grandfather, wanted to have a school that would have a broader curriculum than just Jewish study. He wanted to teach, for instance, the languages of Polish and Russian, I guess this was fairly radical in those days, to Jewish kids. And he really met with a lot of resistance from his family and the class of people (rabbis and teachers) his family associated with, and he basically rebelled. What he did, according to this book, was start hanging out, I think it said "fraternizing," with the poorest and most deprived. He ended up starting a school with the concept of serving the people least fortunate in society and trying to help them become prestigious and learned in the eyes of the community. He instituted a policy of access to study the Torah (which is the Jewish laws, the five books of Moses). He instituted a policy that anybody could study it regardless of ability to pay which was a pretty unusual thing. Wealthy people were the ones that had access to this kind of study for many, many, many centuries in Eastern Europe.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

COWBOY BOB

I'm BOB Glaze... some folks call me "Cowboy" BOB! Even though I don't have a cow and I'm not exactly a boy anymore, I'm still certainly BOB. Speak the name backwards, it's still BOB. Flip the name upside down, it's still BOB. That's about as constant as you can get!

The common name BOB is shared with some interesting people, characters, animals and things... BOB Hope, BOB Dylan, BOB Cratchit, (fill in with your favorites _____!). BOB-O-Link, BOB Cat, BOB White, BOB Tailed Nag, BOB Sled, BOBBERS, BOBBINS, BOBBY Sox, Shish-Ka BOBS, BOBBY Pins, (fill in more favorites _____!).

My Grandmother used to call me BOBBY and I tries to humor her... but I still preferred BOB. Is B O B an acronym for Beauty Or Brains? Beast Of Burden? Bag Of Blarney? Well, maybe... but in my case it could also stand for Befriend Our Biosphere!

HEY HONEY, I SHRUNK THE WORLD! (or)
HEY HARMONY, I SHRUNK THE WORLD!

Did you know... if the Earth was reduced to the size of a beach ball: (1) It wouldn't bounce very well. (2) If you poured all the seas, rivers, lakes and ponds together they would yield about a cup of (polluted?) water. That's not much... think about it!

My wife/buddy Gail and I are trying to Be Our Best and help our hero Jacques Cousteau with his message of warning to the world. We travel, scuba dive and photograph beneath the sea and write songs such as this:

Bless be the waters that cover the Earth...
Bless be the Creatures that dwell there...
Bless be the Children who learn what it's worth,
The People who learn how the care!

The Seas are not sewers, they can't take much more,
The life-breath of Trees you can't buy at a store!
The Land is for living, so we can't go on...
Abusing it till it's all gone!

Elbow to elbow with heroes like Cousteau...
Turning Society on to the Truth!
Eyeball to eyeball, we can't let the sky fall...
The Future belongs to our Youth!

Bless be the Waters and Bless be the Otters...
Bless be the Children and Bless us all!
Bless be the Creatures and pray they can teach Us
Or world is incredibly Small!

"Harmony" years will it take till we learn?
We ask you to Be Our Buddies and HELP.

Thanks!

BEFOREWARD

This yearbook was born outside Garcia's Pizza Parlor in the early winter of 1987. It was a partly sunny day with blustery winds and Jeremy Baron served as a sort of midwife. Three years later we've grown a bit, focused our vision and tightened our graphics. You'll notice in this, our third issue, the virtual elimination of "clip art," a move in the Middle and High School sections away from optical back-grounds towards photographic, more interplay of multiple photos, and an increased degree of abstraction.

History is the focus of this year's effort. From our exhaustively researched "Factoids" found on the bottom outside corner of each page to Roc's family history, we've tried to shed some light on where we've been in the last fifteen years. Following up on last year's "Praise Bob" theme, we're delighted to offer some thoughts by the one and only "Cowboy" Bob. In short, we hope this issue sets the standard by which all yearbooks will be judged.

I was born in Bowling Green Kentucky. As a matter of fact I didn't want to jump into the world head first (who wants to be born in Kentucky?). I stuck my toes out, and then decided I would come out.

When I was about 1 year old, my family moved to the darling little town of Bloomington (where I still live today).

At 4½ years, while strolling in a park, I was abducted by a pack of three headed green Martians, who proceeded to put me into a weird state I still am in today. I would like to thank those little darling Martians, who visit me occasionally and regularly appear in the "Enquirer" and "Star."

There is a bull in the china shop.
I think that it should be a very well behaved ox to be allowed in the store.
It sits behind the counter and bellows at shoplifters.
A sort of watch cow of the store like surveillance camera.
Sits in the corner of the store just as if there was a bull in a china shop.
Quite frightening, yes, very much so to be watched by a cow.

Howdy! What's up! Well, I guess I should mention the fact that this is my last year at Harmony. I'm going to be moving at the end of May to live with my Mom in Colorado Springs, Colorado. I'd like to take this time to thank everyone, however remotely connected with Harmony School. The school that has taught me so many things, like, to look inside people, not just to judge them by their outsides. And other things that at this point I'm too tired to think about. Basically, I just want to leave you with this thought: "When things are bad and just ain't going your way, don't fret, just call the ghostbusters!"

Hey there goofy guys, goofy gals--peace love dove! Wish I could pinch all y'all's cute little cheeks.

School getting you down? I thought so! It's that time of year again. You hate everyone, especially anyone to do with the school. Therefore, I haven't been forgotten by my friends, which I feared the moment I stepped on the plane.

I was greeted Tuesday morning at the Arhus airport by my Farmor (father's mother), Farfar (father's father) and dear sweet cousin Ezra. There were 5 actresses with various colored hair (fx green, orange, red, etc.) hanging around saying lines. I was butted by some big guy, Ezra's friend Carsten got beat up by some people, and some big girl stole my bag. Well, really we had a blast. It was pretty funny actually, even though I thought my legs were going to fall off. I must dead skin flopping around getting in the way. People were fighting and interrupting a lot. It was a lot like Harmony--like watching an ostrich try to dance. It's nice to know United States is what's new today.

Arhus is the hippest city in the country. I was rolled in one. (the reason I wrote café is because I can't remember which letter the word is). Everything is perfectly perfect and quaint and, well, European. Another thing; everybody here speaks Danish. Especially everyone here; they're "young people" and they all talk incredibly fast. Traffic lights in Europe...the yellow light goes on, not only before the light turns red, but also when it turns green. WHOA!!!! Heavy! ...Yes it's true! the Danes smoke and drink all the time. The thing is, they're so conscious. No crap like Budweiser or Stroh's or anything like that. Back in the old days, they used to drink from the barrel, but now, because of all these silly animal rights people, there's just candy. You can't buy alcohol and all that. Denmark in a nutshell.

That's right folks, I'm shy. Believe it or not, I'm shy when I'm in a foreign environment. And this is certainly foreign. We get up every day for breakfast at 8:00 AM. I guess alcohol will be allowed starting sometime next week. I love getting old. I'll be 17 in one month from today. No more sweet sixteen. Hell, I don't give a damn.

I'm visiting my Auntie Inky and her POSSIBLE (Opposite Sex Sharing Same Living Quarters). She's a bit too girly for me. And he refuses to understand English. He speaks Danish with an American accent, which sounds terribly ugly. To be honest, that's how I sound. Their humor is colloquial. Of course I laughed where you were supposed to laugh.

Sorry this hasn't been such a thrilling letter. I'm a bit preoccupied with my laundry. I miss everyone and would certainly enjoy hearing from someone. I miss you Mike. Well, maybe not Mike, but someone else. Just Joshing.

P. S. Also it's my birthday next Wednesday. I want you to know that you're not forgotten, especially on your birthday. Not to drop any hints or anything....

Last year; just about this time; I was pregnant and extremely uncomfortable: People gave me plenty of advice, which is what people do when you resemble an eggplant to the degree I did. "Relax," they said. "Try to enjoy going out to a restaurant without worrying about a babysitter. Get all the sleep you can. You'll wish you had done it later." So, I tried to enjoy getting up 10 times in the middle of the night. I really wanted to find pleasure in the heartburn that resulted after every meal, in a restaurant or otherwise.

Now, of course, I look back at those days and shake my head. Life with a baby difficult? No way! My husband is a dear soul who manages to get home by six every night to help out.

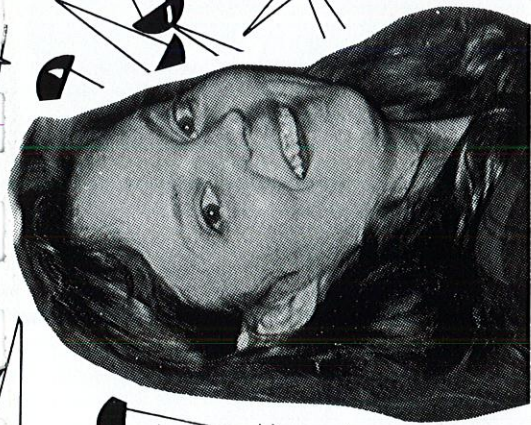

The kids in my class never complain about the baby and are wonderful babysitters. And because I only work part time, I can get so much done in the afternoons. Why, sometimes I manage to do a load of laundry and grade papers! So, it is with complete and utter self-confidence and delight that I say to you:

Fortunately, I have had the opportunity of facilitating learning at Harmony School. Unfortunately, it was only for one year. Fortunately, I was able to work with Michele and teach part time. Unfortunately, Nathaniel, our son, would get bored in the mornings without his Harmony friends and nearly drive me crazy. Fortunately, I worked with some incredible teachers: Michele, Jo, Charlie, Julie, Bart, Barb and Jordan. Unfortunately, it felt like only the beginning. Fortunately, we made many good friends at Harmony, both young and middle-aged. Unfortunately, we will be leaving these friends behind as we embark on a new adventure. Fortunately, we have grown to love and value the Harmony family. Unfortunately, we cannot take you with us. In short, we love you and we will miss you. You remain in our hearts always.

There is just so much to teach and learn. We all strive to make sure to teach that which is most important. To think about those ideas that deserve deep thought and careful consideration. When all is said and done, the one thought, the one ideal that I find most compelling is that self-growth is gained through service to others. In life, the inert idea has little value... the idea that leads to action brings meaning to one's life.

I would like to share with you the ideal that I would most like to pass on to our students. It has been taught in many languages at different times.

Marty Belleher

Trotsky was a great golfer. Che Guevara was noted for his fine bunker play. I think Karl Marx said it best after winning the British 3-Ball Championship, "Gowf, mahn, nevar twas a geeme go guid far the lumpin proletariat." Perhaps this is why, over the years, golf has been so inextricably linked to revolutionary politics.

While it is commonly known that Mao Tse-Tung was accompanied by Niccolo, his life-long caddie, upon his famous "long march," few realize he and Chiang Kai Shek oncè held a putting contest to determine the fate of China. Mao apparently lost, took to the hills and the rest is history. As too was the "shot heard 'round the world," when Sacco, teamed with Vanzetti, caused quite a stir at the 1919 Anarchist International. Unfortunately, due to a rules violation over the spelling of the word "Czar," the two were unable to defend their title.

Today, the tradition continues on a global scale. From the sweeping popularity of the double knit golf sweater among the Sandinistas of Nicaragua, to the quiet elegance of Polish Solidarity Union members carrying, in their pants pockets, shellacked divots from the Old Course at St. Andrews. Trotsky would be proud.

I have experienced a year of tremendous changes... from the discovery of a new quasar that more than doubles the time of existence, to the incredible shift of world politics, to moving into a new home that was built with love.

Change often occurs with resistance on one side and struggle on the other side. For myself, I never expected to move from the house in which I gave birth to six children. In my mind, this house was truly a historical monument to last forever.

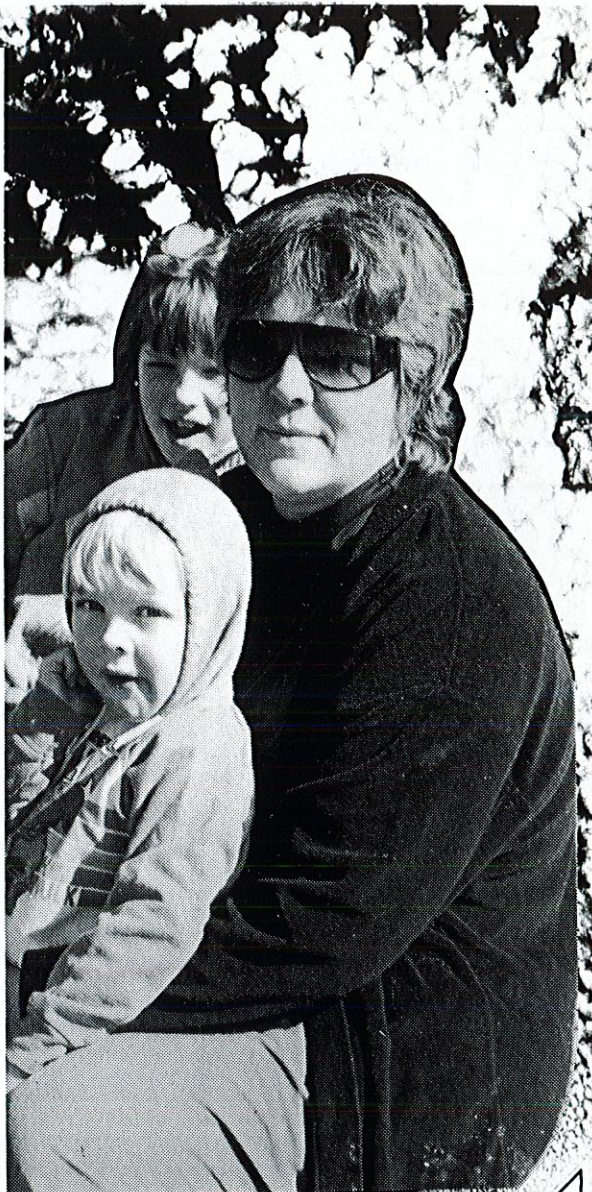

Then life shifted. I had longed for a quantum leap for years. I struggled when the time was upon me. Yet, working with hundreds and hundreds of people on the day of our house raising was an experience I never envisioned. Why resist? I enjoy raising my expectations.

The day in, day out experience of life after school surely parallels the rest of existence. As a child, going to school every day was monotonous for me. As an adult, I still struggle with this. Yet I have completed my third year as the after school teacher and am raising my expectations for the fourth.

The children that I learn and grow with at Harmony inspire my visions for the future. As human beings we have surely placed ourselves in a toxic dilemma. These children, working together cooperatively, have shown tremendous care and love for the preservation of our earth and human race.

Thank you for sharing your children with me.

According to the Dalai Lama, Buddhist teaching can be condensed into two sentences:

"If you are able to do so, help others. If you are unable to do so, at least do not harm them."

Perhaps the wisdom of Buddhism can be applied to environmental issues. This is the year of the environment. The 20th anniversary of Earth Day. If we are unable to help mother earth, at least we can avoid harming her any further. Each one of us can make a difference! I'm glad Harmony has made environmental education a high priority. After all, if we can't preserve this planet, all our

When our student photographers asked me to "lean over the edge of the library loft" I did not recognize the symbolism in the moment. "Leaning over the edge" seems like an apt metaphor for Harmony School at this juncture. This has been a year of edging out of the comforting security that came with the acquisition of the Elm Heights building in 1986. Harmony has begin to come to grips with the responsibilities of being a unique school in a conservative educational community at a moment in history that is demanding educational risk-taking. With illiteracy, ecological disasters, and citizen apathy all on the rise, the time for comfortable security is quickly becoming a fond memory. The edge is being expanded at Harmony on many fronts simultaneously. This past year at the school has seen more parent involvement, more staff responsibility within a new committee structure, the beginning of long-range environmental and recycling commitments, a new program for teen mothers, talk of a night school, educating the public schools and the business community about the need for radical school restructuring, teaching a semester long class at Bloomington South and the opening of a downtown Harmony Development Office. The school has welcomed many visitors (both domestic and foreign) who want to see, and more importantly, feel, hear, and touch an exciting educational environment. Stay tuned.

Well, when I was a youngin I youse to go out in the garden and eat worms. So my ol' man builded a little fence for me to play in. So, of course, I tried to get out and I got my head stuck in the fence. So I screamed and yelled. So my ol' man came out and saw me and he scrambled back in the house and came back out with a camera and took a few snap shots at me. Then he helped me out. Those were the young years. When I was born on April 5, 1977, I sloosed out and said, "Wah!" Actually, it wasn't quite like that. They cut my Mom open and dragged me out. Soon afterwards, my parents said, "Ooooooh, what a cutesie,wootsie, wittiy bitty!!! Wets name the wittle cutie Caitlin, Ooh, hi babie, caiti.

My childhood did not get much better for my mother insistantly called me obscene names like Katydid, and Cadidly hopper. I finally committed myself to a mental institution in which I was recently discharged on account of singing too high.

I am now at Harmony!

It was a hot summer day. Something was squirming around in my mommy's belly and it was ME!! (Hilary Heneger!) At 2:15 Sunday, September 7, 1980 I was born!!!! Right at that very second the whole universe paused and a legend was born! 3 years later I went to a party and I met Julie Barnes and Emma Rice! And they became my friends! Some free advice for those contemplating adulthood:

1. Think a lot. Get rid of your TV set and learn to read. Television feeds you information faster than you can critically evaluate. Creates mental indigestion.
2. "Educational" institutions protect the child in you. They give you space to play, to explore, to question, to try on different personalities. Lots of other institutions don't value these activities. In fact, a lot of people seem to think that graduation is the time to leave this childish stuff behind, but I don't recommend it.
3. Follow your vision. Throw yourself into the things you really love. (If there's nothing you really love, you need to slow down and immerse yourself in life's simple joys for a while-- maybe go climb a mountain and take a good look around you.) But be aware you'll have to compromise at first. If your dream involves other people, it will take time for you to educate one another. Nothing starts perfect, or there'd be no challenge to it.
4. Have fun. You deserve it. Ask yourself occasionally, "Am I having enough fun, lately?" If the answer is no, maybe its time for a change.

Safe journey,
BH

THE WITCH NEXT DOOR
by Sacha Vosekas

Hi. My name is Stephanie Whiling, and right next door to me lives a witch. And me and my little brother and sister, Pat and Jessa. And don't forget my mother and father. We like to go places with the witch but wherever we go the witch always gets laughed at, but we don't pay any attention to them.

One day my parents got a call from my uncle that my mother's sister, Sally, was going to have a baby and Sally wanted us to go to Kentucky and we lived in Texas.

That's a lot to drive but we're going to take a plane, then a train and then a bus. Then we will be at my Aunt Sally's house.

So we packed our clothes and as you know we go everywhere with the witch. So we got in the car and left.

When we got to the airport and were on the plane Pat said, "Where's the witch?"

We had forgotten her in Texas! We all felt bad. We wondered what she was doing, and this is what she was doing. She was sitting on her porch and crying. I bet she thought we had not liked her any more.

When we got to Kentucky I had a new baby cousin. It was a girl and her name was Magen.

When we got back home we saw a for sale sign in the witch's yard, and on the porch was the witch crying with her cat, Batty.

We tried talking to her, but she would not listen. When it was dinner time we asked her over and she said yes, but only if we talked it over. We agreed.

I started the conversation. I said, "We were going to ask you, but we were so excited that we forgot about you. But that doesn't mean we don't like you!"

"Well, a-a-a-a-a-, no," the witch said, "but wouldn't you be sad if someone forgot you, huh?"

So it ended up that we made up, but the only problem was that the witch forgot to take down the for sale sign and someone bought the house, and then the witch had nowhere to go.

But in our house all the rooms were filled, so either Pat, Jessa or I would have to sleep on the sofa and our sofa is not comfortable at all, so we picked out of a hat and Jessa got it, but, of course, I had to have it, because she was scared to sleep in the living room by herself.

It was time to go to bed and I was asleep, but I was awakened by a sound coming from the kitchen. I couldn't make up my mind if I should go in or not.

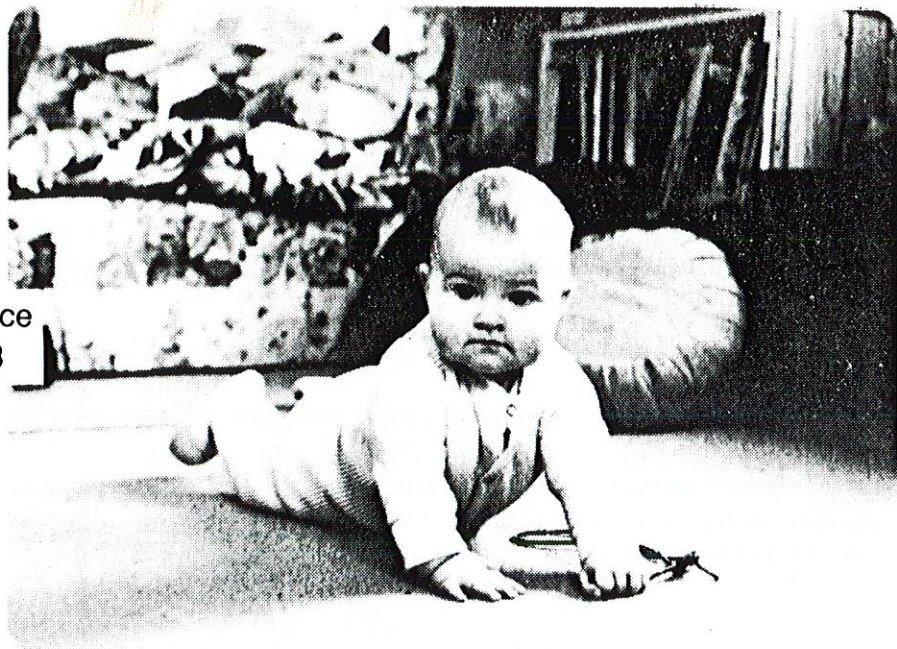

I got my baseball bat from my brother's room, and I was just about to open my brother's bedroom door when the kitchen door opened, so I opened Pat's door and jumped in with him.

Then he yelled, "Help!," and Jessa, Mom and Dad woke up and ran to Pat's room to see what was going on. I was next to him. Boy, was he mad!

So the next day we decided that the witch could live with us! So that means that I have to share a room with my brother. EEW!!

So that's the story of my adventure of me and my witch. I just hope that this doesn't happen next time a witch lives next door.

My name is Marabai Rose Parsons. I was born and still live in Monroe County. I've been going to Harmony School for seven years! I am 13. Harmony School has taught me to love others and myself. I want to make people happy and bring joy to them all my life. I love to sing. I attend the Indiana University Children's Choir. I want to do something in music when I get a little older. I also want to do something in psychology. I love helping someone who needs to talk about their problems. I know that I sound like a goody, goody two shoes, but all this is true. I think that the point of being around other people is to learn from them and love them.

Marabai Parsons

There are lots of things the same at Honey Creek that are at Harmony. We both encourage working at your own pace. We both have women teachers. Teachers both use chalkboards at both schools. Both schools have bathrooms. We both have chores. At both schools kids help kids. We both have the same subjects (reading, writing and math). Both schools have small amounts of kids. At both schools the kids can play at lunchtime. At both schools we use cursive for writing and print for reading. At both schools the kids can work independently. We both recycle. We both have an hour for lunch. Both schools have big windows. There is spelling at both schools. We both have lights.

There are also lots of differences between Honey Creek and Harmony such as at Honey Creek they play baseball with a flat bat and here we play it with a round bat. At Harmony we have more room to play outside. At Honey Creek there is no plastic. There are computers and typewriters at Harmony. At Honey Creek they only have one teacher. Harmony has books. At Honey Creek they use quill pens. At Harmony we use pencils or ballpoint pens. At Honey Creek they play different games than Harmony (Andy over the school). At Harmony we have school 5 days a week. At Honey Creek they have school 6 days a week. Papers are burned at Honey Creek and recycled at Harmony. At Harmony we have indoor bathrooms, not like Honey Creek. Last but not least, we have different chores.

HONEY CREEK COMPARED TO HARMONY

THE FOUR KIDS AND THE ALIEN by Daniel Canada

Once upon a time there was a boy and his three friends and an alien. Andy was the alien. The boys' names were Daniel, Nick and Ben, the Retainer. They found a time machine and they got inside and they turned it on, and they were way, way, way, way, way, way, way in the past and they saw a cave man. It looked like JR and JR almost killed them. Suddenly Ben took his retainer and it hit JR in the head and knocked him back. Ben's retainer was ruined. Ben was mad. JR said, "Aga baga." That means, "What was that?"

Nick said, "I'm hungry."

Andy said, "Food. Food."

JR said, "What is food?"

They got in the time machine and they went into the future and they went to Mc D's. Daniel, Nick and Ben got a Mars meal, and it had little tablets and they went home and the world blew up and they lived happily ever after.

MORGAN

It was late one night, and I saw a cat lying off to the side of the road. I showed my mom and she stopped. It was a young female. She didn't move at all. She just lay there. My mom picked her up and brought her back to the truck. Then I noticed that one of her eyes was cut. My mom said, "She probably got in a fight." So we took her home and fed her. The next day we looked in the paper and we didn't see anything in the lost and found describing Morgan. (That's the name we gave her.) Now we have her as a regular everyday pet for my family. She has a black mask and a white vest.

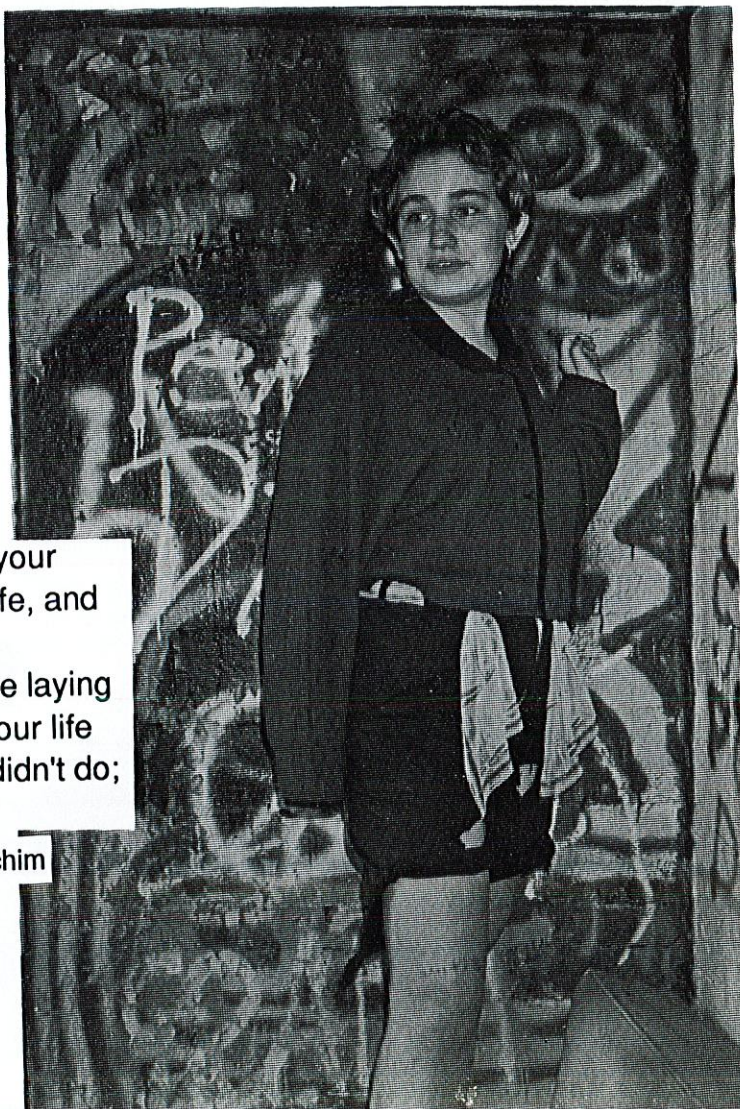

High School male bonding

One night when I was about two years old I was with my family in the airport. It was a blizzard outside, so I was running up and down the plane boarding, and there were about 500 people waiting for the plane, too. So what I did is I stuck my head in the bars on the railing. So I started to cry and everyone started to say, "Is she OK?" and Heidi was laughing her head off. So I got my head out and everyone clapped.

Emma

My mom was in labor with me for 36 hours. I was born on July 1, 1977. For a month after I was born I grew a pound a week. If I continued to grow at that rate, I would weigh around 600 pounds.

Ok well, when I was just born a few hours ago, my dad went to this bar. He was really happy that I was born. He went to the jukebox. He meant to play a really happy song, but instead he played a really sad song. Everybody thought he was sad. Ha Ha Ha!

August 6, 1982 is my birth. When I was a little girl, a little girl pushed the corner of my mouth and I got stitches. My dad was a early teacher at Harmony, but we moved to Boston and back. My best friends are Carrie, Lina, Leah, Emily H., and Emily E. Harmony is one of my favorite schools. I like baby bagels with cream cheese. I have a little brother named Adam.

When I was a little baby, my mom loved me. But I loved everyone. My brothers played with me. So did my sister. I love Madonna.

Important Biographical Sketch:

I was born in Summertown, Tennessee and the Farm. Some people know what the Farm is, some don't. Then, when I was a week old, I moved to Bloomington. I moved to the Allen building. My mom had a shop also there. Then, when I was 9 months old, I moved next to 2nd Street Park. Then, as soon as I knew it, there were two months till my brother was born. We had to move. The house wasn't big enough for another baby. So I was almost 4 when we moved there. So skipping some years, when I was nine, I started liking The New Kids on the Block. Now I'm ten and I still live in that last house.

Any publication is complicated, one involving this many people and this many pages is particularly difficult. Its success or failure rests with the teamwork of photographers, layout and design people, typesetters, cutters, and writers. Then, assuming there's a finished product, printers, paper companies, binders, etc..

With that in mind we'd like to thank the following people:

Nathan for his computer expertise and editorial savvy. He will be missed.

Art/Lynn Shapiro from A-1 Printing. Their generosity with time and materials allows this yearbook to happen.

Renee Rader at Kinkos for her special attention and help with costs.
