1987

The Harmony School Yearbook began some 20 years ago, which makes it, well, older than any current student. It came on the heels of an earlier publication--Harmony Times, which lasted 18 issues and spanned 10 years. Harmony Times established a do-it-yourself approach with a nod towards contemporary graphic design. In 1987, the desktop revolution brought about by computers, had yet to trickle down to the average person. We used typewriters, cutting and pasting our pages as we sat around a large table making a huge mess. It was a fun, albeit primitive affair. Eventually, technology began to creep in--some word processing here & there, some photos screened to create half tones. Eventually a computer arrived, then a digital camera, a scanner, zip drives, flash drives, etc. Instead of sitting around a table working as a group, kids now sat hunched over computers. The years of trying to unravel the secrets of Adobe Photoshop are over. And with all the technical advances you'd think it would get easier--it hasn't. And once we hit our digital stride, you'd think we'd get better--that hasn't necessarily happened either. So, what has happened over those 20 years? The desk top revolution came and went. Hard copy media was pressured by purely digital media -- some yearbooks went video based. A glance back at previous editions of our book reveals a trend that seems to be getting stronger -- the dominance of the visual element. Words have taken a back seat to digital manipulation, and yes, style can win out over substance. And that's not a good thing. We suspect that our yearbook reflects larger trends that define the ever shifting cultural landscape and some of those shifts are regrettable.

So, what does the future hold? That's hard to say except that change is likely to continue, including the possibility of the yearbook morphing into something new. The product might change, but the process will hopefully remain true to the early years where kids made creative messes. That's the legacy of Leila Voyles, Caroline Nash, Naomi Zimmer, Christian Ebel Orr, Andy Lund, Ruby Troup, Bianca Davila, Nile Arena, Greta Zimmer, Dan Backler, Camellia Cosgray, Izzy Jarvis, Tyanne Barrentine, Chrystal Thomas, Shahana Ansari, Zeri Ort, and literally hundreds of creative kids.

“Truffula Seeds” Wreak Havoc with Environment

This Social Action Day, many students were given “truffula seeds” made of plastic and spray painted silver. They were told, metaphorically, to plant them. Unfortunately, many students took the task seriously and disposed of this toxic material in Bloomington’s green spaces. It seems future generations will reap horrible environmental consequences. “They’re made of plastic. THEY DON’T BIODEGRADE!” said Al Gore, the former Vice President of the United States who visited the tainted green sites. “Plus, the paint fumes from painting them will stay in the atmosphere for months, killing many birds and eventually causing acid rain.”

Ross and Alex Start Rogue “Chrome” Yearbook Issue

For about three years, Alex Voyles and Ross McKinney have been pushing “Chrome” as a yearbook theme. After numerous rejections, they’ve decided to take matters into their own hands. “I know it’s listed on the cover, but it’s just not big enough. Chrome needs to be big, huge and very shiny,” said Ross on the subject of the cover. “I still think that ‘The Good, the Bad, and the Not Necessarily Well-Groomed’ is the best,” whined Max.....

Brendan Ships Brenton to Uruguay in Fit of Name-Rage

The school turned out in mourning yesterday after Brenton Smith's sudden disappearance was announced. It seems he was packed up & shipped by fellow middle schooler Brendan Cook in a fit of rage over their names. Brendan screamed as he was taken away by the police, "IT'S NOT FAIR!!! I WAS HERE FIRST! I WAS HERE FIIIIIIIIIIIIIRSSSSST!"

Crab People Try to Take Over School, Travis Unsuccessful

Known crab person Travis Parker tried to rally up his fellow crab people to take over Harmony to no avail. "It's obvious why it didn't work. The crab people just don't respect him, ever since he ate crab in an attempt to blend in with the humans," said McCarry Reynolds, local spy and expert on crab people.

"However evil the crabs are, they don't tolerate cannibalism."

Ross Abducted by Aliens,

Replaced by One

Middleschooler Ross McKinney seems to have been abducted and replaced by aliens after coming in bald, something only aliens seem to be. "His head is just so creepy. Why would he just shave his head? He's totally been replaced," commented Harmony ufo-ologist Satish Brown. "I'm not an alien," commented Ross upon hearing this conclusion.

"Alex just said, 'it'll be a new beginning,' and I decided sure, why not?"

Horrible Nineties Fad

"Tamagachi" Recurring in Fifth & Sixth Grades, Students Too Young to Foresee Consequences

The Fifth and Sixth graders have recently stumbled upon a trend of small electronic pets from Japan, not seen since the nineties. "Why weren't they educated on the dangers of Tamagachi when we had the chance?!?!?" screamed Sarah Kolodziej at the heavens angrily. "Gigapets were better," commented Alisha Wagner, "They may have been generic, but they were freakin' awesome."

Aliens Send Message to Harmony, Zeri Translates Instantly

Justin, Spencer and Val Swear They're Not Scene, They're an Arms Race

Justin Saucier, Spencer Kobyłka and Caliedh Valkyrie, despite so much evidence to the contrary, still stand by the idea that they're not scene, they're an arms race. "I mean, Spencer looks exactly like the bass player from Fall Out Boy... in middle schooler form," said Sarah Kolodziej, a clear-thinking, logical person. "They're totally an arms race," commented Jacob Hernandez, Spencer's cousin, who is not only biased, but doesn't even go to this school, so his opinion doesn't really matter.

Bloodfeud Between the Land and Voyles Dynasties Traced Back to Pre-Human Times

Recent discoveries in Harmony history have traced the feud between the two big families to early points in human evolution. However, nowadays, not many know of this feud. It's generally been forgotten since the tacit agreement not to talk about it was taken out of the Ethos. For the past few years, the Voyles dynasty has been in decline, mostly thanks to the alliance between the Freese-Posthumas and the Lands.

"Voyles? As in Alex Voyles? I thought he was an only child..." commented Caliedh Valkyrie, a newcomer with no knowledge of Harmony history. "If you look at all of the old yearbooks, about 10% of the students aren't in either of the clans. The rest is half and half Land or Voyles. This is a blood feud from farther back than we can imagine," said Roly Carspecken, Harmony historian and folklorist, "Some Maori tribesmen say that it will be the only thing to outlast time."

Magical Portal to Infinite Peanuts Found in Marty's Room

Yearbook students were horrified Monday when Marty announced that he truly had no idea where the constant supply of peanuts in his room came from. He then explained that normally he just uses that bottle for water, and every morning when he comes to school it is once again full of the delicious salted peanuts. "Dear GOD, this is horrifying! I eat those things everyday!" commented Caliedh Valkyrie, yearbook page editor. "It must be some weird type of fungus."

Middle School Prints Own Currency, Secedes From U.S.

After years of being oppressed and making rather redundant complaints about Bush because everyone else is doing it, the middle school has seceded from the U.S.! They have recently started printing "Ross Rupees", very easily counterfeitable bills created in Photoshop, each with Ross' face on them. "Fighting the man isn't as much of a problem," said Spencer Kobyłka. "Not that it was hard... I'm so punk-rock." But none are as punk rock as Ross. After printing the rupees, the newly formed middle school "economy" is booming. It is mostly centered on energy drinks and Doritos. There is, however, a slight problem with inflation.

"Brass Ensemble Hero"

A new videogame has replaced DDR in the middle school and the trend is infecting the rest of the school. "Brass Ensemble Hero" is the latest craze. "Finally I can get into these crazy videogames the kids are into," said Marty Belcher, middle school teacher and accomplished saxophonist. "It's 'hip' to be into jazz!" Some students are a bit apprehensive, though. "Why are we playing this? I seriously don't understand why this is fun," commented Dorian Balle-Gifford. "I guess I just don't have what it takes to be a hero in a brass ensemble."

David Sick of Hawaii

High school science teacher David Christman was found in his backyard next to a bonfire fueled by ukuleles, leis, and Hawaiian shirts. It seems that after a year of working at the Connections School in Hawaii, David is actually sick of Hawaii. "You can take all your mumus and your ohana, and shove them up your mahimahi, because I'm saying aloha to Hawaii permanently... and I don't mean hello." Student Max Barrentine was found later trying to retrieve a burnt ukulele. Continued on page 512

BIKESMITHS

Closing: Twenty years.....my god, Ronald Reagan was president...the cold war, Berlin Wall, Soviet Union break-up, Chernobyl, the birth of the Internet, Bill Clinton, O.J. Simpson, Y2K, Aids, CNN, MTV, global warming, the war on Terror, George Bush, 9-11, Katrina, and now Brittany Spears--it's enough to make one's head spin.

So, perhaps we can end with a joke from the late 80's:

How many Exxon Valdez Captains does it take to make an oil spill?

One and a fifth!

(see, you could even make jokes about environmental disaster back then)

Thanks to the current editors, as well as Shahana, Teal, Jordan, Chelsea, Tyann, Jessi, Annie, Alisha, Val, Max, Lauren, Roly, Izzy, Tosh, Sumer, Spencer, Jacob, the Harmony School staff and all those students that struggled with their page.

This is Yoko Ono's contribution to our yearbook-- a post card whereby a person writes their wishes for a better world.
