Annoyed....or wishful--the spirit of post 20th century America? What constitutes annoyance is difficult to nail down--hence the Annoyance Scale you'll find in the Gizzzard. I'll give you a hint--annoyance falls somewhere between distracted & dispondant. Interestingly, as we put the book together we discovered that without coming out and saying it directly, we couldn't tell which direction the person was going. Do you find money, for example, annoying, or something worth wishing for? And Justin Bieber? He, perhaps more than any single force, divides the students into two camps--those who wish they could touch the "magic" and those are are simply annoyed. But, in truth, our capacity for being annoyed, seems to be on the rise. And talk radio tells us who to be annoyed with. And "social media" lets us know we're not alone; that a whole bunch of people feel equally annoyed. Which leaves us where? Perhaps a bit stunned as America's sense of self gets poked in the eye by events we have little control over. Yeah, that's what I call annoying.

"What are you thinking about?

I am thinking of an early summer. I am thinking about wet hills in the rain. Pouring water. Shedding it. Down empty acres of oak and manzanita. Down to the old green brush tangled in the sun, Greasewood, sage, and springmustard. Or the hot wind coming down from Santa Ana. Driving the hills crazy. A fast wind with a bit of dust in it. Bruising everything and making the seed sweet. Or down in the city where peach trees are awkward as young horses, would like to write a poem that is as slow as summer. As slow as getting started As 4th of July somewhere around the middle of the second stanza. After a lot of unusual rain, California seems long in the summer. I would like to write a poem as long as California And as slow as summer. Do you get me doctor? It would have to be as slow as the very tip of summer. As slow as summer seems on a hot day drinking... outside Riverside. Or standing in the middle of a white-hot road, Between Bakersfeild and Hell, Waiting for Santa Claus, ...

And there are kites caught on the wires up above the street lamps, And the storm drains are all choked with dead branches. WHAT ARE YOU THINKING? I think that I

What are you thinking now? I'm thinking that she is very much like California. when she is still, her dress is like a road map. Highways, traveling up and down her skin. Long, empty highways. With the moon chasing jackrabbits across them. On hot summer nights, I am thinking that her body could be California, and I a rich Eastern tourist Lost somewhere between Hell and Texas, Looking at a map of long, wet, dancing California. That I have never seen. Send me some penny picture post cards, lady, send them.... One of your body sweeping like a three-lane highway Twenty-seven miles from a night's lodging in the world's oldest hotel. What are you thinking? I am thinking about how many times this poem will be repeated. How many summers will torture California until the damned maps burn, Until the mad cartographer, Falls to the ground and possesses the sweet, thick earth from which he has been hiding. What are you thinking now?

I am thinking of a poem that could go on forever."

Recently, a rumor spread through the school about Tod a student who allegedly joined the high school. The thing was, no one actually saw evidence that he was real, until March 5th, when middle school student Sunny Aldrich found the book of Tod. She organized around herself a group of followers. Collectively they became known as the Cult of Tod. "It is obvious," said Sunny, " that we have been visited by a divine power that is going to try and correct our evil ways. The cult of Tod are the first to follow this power."

the coffee house with room to grow!

Rachael's Cafe grew out of a desire to create a friendly, inclusive, peaceful atmosphere for all. Our mission is to bring understanding, education, and acceptance over a cup of coffee.

We offer gourmet coffees and drinks along with homemade soups, salads, sandwiches and entrees. We believe that high quality, modestly priced food and drinks served in an unashamed, eclectic environment will nurture the meeting and mixing of both friends and strangers. An open mic night will give everyone the chance to express their views or share their talents, including live music and open discussions on diverse topics.

'Bloomington is a fabulous community full of open people - but is lacking a place designed to welcome folks of all walks of life, be it gender, race, religion or whatever your sameness or uniqueness may be,' says owner Rachael Jones.

If you build it they will come. If it's good they will return!

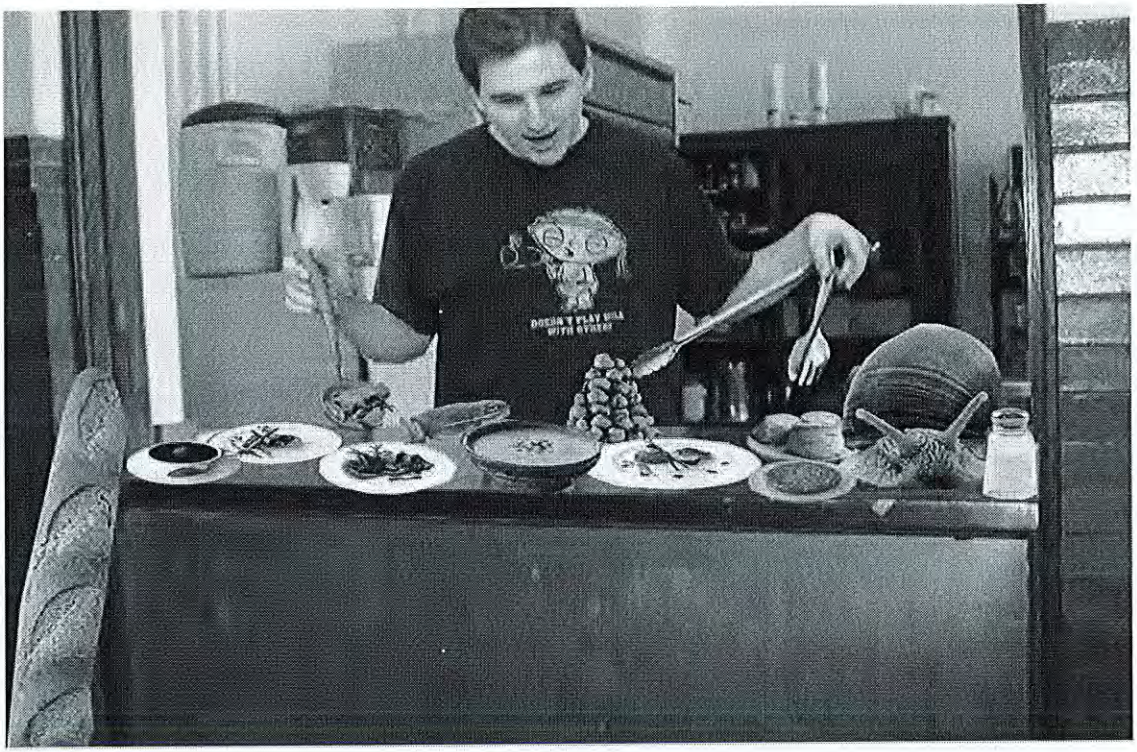
RUNNING OF THE 5th GRADERS

The annual running of the fifth graders, an event that was inspired by the Spanish running of the bulls, resulted in disaster when the stampeding herd of 5th graders charged into the playground, trampling 7 ECPers. One ECPer who was injured had this to say, "My friends and I were minding our own business and having fun, when a herd of angry fifth graders came running through the playground, trampling everything in their path." continued on page 324



JAMES FIXES 12 COURSE MEAL

High schooler James Pfister is known for cooking elaborate lunches, but he surpassed all his previous meals with a french-inspired 12 course lunch. "J'ai commencé avec le foie gras, puis j'ai eu le boudin blanc. Après que j'ai eu Foie de veau, puis j'ai mangé des escargots et blanquette de veau..." commented James when asked about his food.

Middle School Tightens Border Control Laws

Due to the influx of 4th graders during lunch, middle school legislators issued identification to all 4th graders. If a fourth grader is found in the middle school without identification, they are taken for questioning and after 3 weeks they turn up in the...

Gus's dog finishes his (Gus's) homework

Gus's dog Cap has been doing Gus's homework, but yesterday quit and turned to a career in poetry. He writes as beautifully as Shakespeare's dog, and has won several talent shows. Cap found his passion when Gus gave him the command to speak and he barked out, "Who's Woods Are These" by Robert Frost. Caps brain … Continued on Page 324

GREYSON SPEAKS OUT IN FAMILY MEETING

Kelli recently brought Greyson to a family meeting. The students had no idea he had something to say about the middle school. We ignored his raised hand until finally he blurted out "I am tired of the middle schoolers immaturity. There is no use debating it. You philistenes aren't fit for society." Greyson then corraled the middle schoolers into a closet. Suddenly, Kelli turned the corner, she was late for family meeting. Grey played innocent. Kelli, is confused about the situation and leaves with Greyson thinking everyone has already left.....

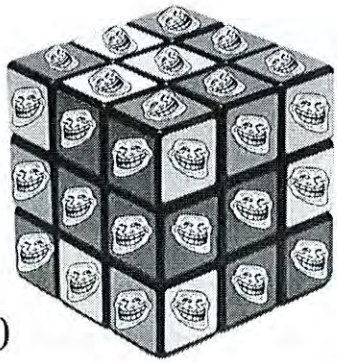
Hipsters from History

by Aaron Palmer

Ciabhan's Heifer International project wildly sucsesfull

Heifer International is a charity to give animals to poor people in other counties, and this year Ciabhan raised funds to donate to them. Ciabhan even volunteered to bring the animal to the country so he could see their happy faces. The chairity then asked Ciabhan if he could take some other animals, too. This led to the constructon of the ark ... Continued on page 324

U MAD?



SKI TRIP CANCELLED

The middle schoolers were all disappointed when the ski trip they had been looking forward to was cancelled due to a glacier that moved in front of all the doors in and out of Harmony School, trapping students inside. One student said, "We would be having so much fun skiing if it wasn't for this darn glacier."

Cypress Kee, devoted Student Solidarity rep, displays proper pizza dispensing technique. "You can't be too careful," he said, "and I happen to like wearing the booties."

DAMNED GOLF BALL GAME

The golf ball game, a hard and sometimes frustrating game in which you attempt to get a golf ball in a globe onto a tee, nearly drove a student mad. After 600 attempts, the student snapped and tried to destroy the game by hitting it with a 60-degree wedge. The club impacted hard on the globe, but did no damage. Students now suspect that the game is inhabited by a demon.

The concepts of annoyance & wishes reflect a similar sense of dissatisfaction. We picked this theme because it seemed to capture the unique spirit of the moment. And, as is usual, we saw a range of responses from the personal to the political with a heavy dose of pop culture thrown in.

We would like to thank all those students who approached the challenge without annoyance--who came up with thoughtful ideas, took many photographs and generally made things fun. And thanks to yearbook staffers who enjoyed making pages, taking photos, writing gizzard articles, selling ads, and running around the school. And thanks to the teachers who made their students available, helped with the process, and did transition pages.

And a big thanks to Sparky who knows her stuff, Peter Samualson and Kristin Engblom who stepped into the swamp we call advertising & made it work, Taresah Youngman, Dana Cook, and Michael Berndt who made their services available at the end. And a special thanks to Rebecca Lendman, who fell from the sky and saved the day.
