A young woman with long, wavy brown hair is performing a handstand on a paved street. She is wearing a light-colored, short-sleeved shirt, light-colored shorts, and dark sneakers with white laces. Her legs are spread wide in the air, and her arms are extended downwards to support her weight on the ground. The background shows a residential street with parked cars, bare trees, and a clear sky.

Introduction

Adventure: a, an undertaking usually involving danger and unknown risks
b, an exciting or remarkable experience
c, related words include escapade, lark, ploy, act, action, deed, doing, feat, episode, occasion, baptism, ordeal, test, trial, tribulation, enterprise, risk, venture, expedition, exploration, performance, quest, stunt.

In other words, adventure can be anything--learning to ride a bike, being lost two blocks from home, becoming a parent, traveling just about anywhere. The key ingredient is that something unknown is going to happen. You'll realize that there are things you don't understand, that there are different ways to look at the world around you. This book is about adventures in the past, present and future. Some adventures are simple, some complex.

We have kids going to the grocery store and kids going to the moon,
And yes, the Grim Reaper makes an appearance pointing the way to perhaps the ultimate adventure.

A Brief Excursion Behind the “Iron Curtain”

In December of 1970 I spent a few days visiting friends who lived “behind the iron curtain.” I had spent the autumn months of that year living and studying in Salamanca, Spain, and exploring that country more widely, on a foreign study program, and I had traveled to Czechoslovakia (the present day Czech Republic) to pay a visit to two pen pals that I had made in that country shortly after the Soviet crackdown on the so-called “Prague Spring,” a short-lived thaw in the repressive political and social conditions that prevailed in that East European country under the hegemony of the powerful Soviet Union at the time. In my last year of high school I had struck up an interesting correspondence, exchanging letters sent by mail (There was no email in those days) with my two friends-- Alexandra Bednarova of Brno (in the region on Moravia) and Eva Nopova of a small town named Prerov (also of Moravia)--and was ongoing through several of my college years.

So around the middle of December at the end of my time in Salamanca, I took a bus first to Barcelona, than one to Geneva, Switzerland, doing a bit of sightseeing there. From Geneva I took an overnight train that went through Zurich and on to Vienna. In that lively city I enjoyed some sight-seeing and a few of the city’s many fine coffeehouses in the city in the company of a young Yugoslav friend who was fluent in Spanish. We communicated that way since his English was not very good and I knew no Serbian. He was kind and helped me locate the Czechoslovak embassy where I was able to get a visa for a several-day stay in that Soviet-dominated country.

It was early on a Sunday morning when I caught the bus that took me behind the Curtain to Brno to meet up with Sasa (Alexandra). She and her family welcomed me very kindly and did their best to speak to me in English. I fondly remember the time spent there with her and her friends visiting local landmarks, enjoying afternoon tea, and even attending a rock concert. My original plan was to travel directly from Brno to Prerov, but Sasa’s family highly recommended I include Praha (Prague) in my itinerary. They were so kind in contacting a family that they knew in Prague and arranging for me to stay with them. So on I went to Prague, which is a truly lovely city with lots of monuments and history. Among the other sights, I saw the famous Wenceslaus Square and the Charles Bridgeover the Vltava River in the Czech capital.

From Prague I caught a train for Prerov but missed my stop (and my arranged meeting at the station with Eve and her family) and had to get off at a town farther down the track and send them a hurried telegram to let them know I’d be late in arriving. After some scrambling, I managed to arrive at the Prerov station in early morning. It was already dark and since it was Christmas Eve, nobody else was at the station, except a somewhat inebriated Russian soldier. I tried me best, with gestures and the address written on paper, to ask directions. The man, not very helpful, gestured vaguely into the distance. So I set out, trudging through the snow, looking for the address. At one point, in the general neighborhood of their apartment as it turned out, I encountered a passerby and tried to explain that I was looking for the residence if the Nop family. They provided some further help in the right direction. Soon I found the apartment and was very warmly received by Eva and her parents. They escorted me right in to their traditional Christmas Eve dinner, which consisted of baked carp and other Czech delicacies. It was a wonderful evening, and they told me that they had received a call telling them that a young American was out on the street looking for their home. It was the neighbor I had chanced to meet on the street. Prerov was a small town and had a very warm feel, despite the cold and snow of December. My excursion behind the Iron Curtain had left me touched by the care, concern, and lovely hospitality of the Czech people.

My one physical momento of a Bloomington to Yosemite bike trip I took at the age of 21, is a yellowed photo of me standing at the edge of Death Valley, Mount Whitney looming in the distance. The trip was a last minute decision. I figured I'd give it a week, if I didn't like it, I'd hop a bus and head home. A week out I was in the middle of Missouri & had gone too far to go home.

This was 1974, 40 years ago, bike touring was in its infancy. We were something of a novelty--like the guy crossing the country on horseback ahead of us, or the guy making headlines roller skating across Southern Canada while we slogged it out down below. We didn't make any headlines, but people were curious, somewhat disbelieving, but ultimately kind-hearted. People bought us meals, drinks, invited us into their homes. A little bit of our adventure rubbed off on them. Unbenknownst to us, we had wandered blindly into the mythology of "place." Leaving Las Vegas we were told no one could survive the desert on bicycle. We heard similar warnings about the Mojave, Wolf Creek Pass, the headwinds of Kansas. But we didn't know better & kept going, ending with a 16 mile descent into Yosemite Valley.

I retraced my journey (with car) some 35 years later & was astounded by the vast distances & how the little towns had changed (many for the worse). But the people seemed the same--doing what they had to do to survive & treating strangers with a degree of kindness.

New School Mascot Unearthed in Snowbank

Ethan Thompson, a student at Harmony School, recently found a mastodon in a snow pile in the parking lot. Students have adopted it as their new mascot. There are now t-shirts, campaign ads, rallies and general hubbub. The finder of the "new mascot" is withholding the find for fear of having the artifact stolen. If any more news shows up we'll cover it! This has been, The Horn, or The Tusk we might have to change it in the near future...

Rody Goes Missing,

Inspired by the Life of Pi movie, Rody escaped Marty's classroom and took to sea. "I was sick of being painted--first blue, then red, then white, then yellow," Rody said. "I figured if I wore this tiger mask no one would notice me." At last report he was off the coast of Hawaii floating in an ECP sled.

Corrections: 2013 yearbook

The Yearbook article about Little Bub visiting Harmony School's Early Childhood Program incorrectly stated that Sallyann Murphy's dog, Sabrina, swallowed local internet sensation Little Bub. Furthermore, there were no shrieks of dismay, uncontrollable crying, or throwing of bodies upon the floor in hissy fits as previously reported. The yearbook regrets the error.

Anisa Successfully Debates Non-Existence of Elijah

The Middle School debates this year included many serious topics, like “does bread really fall butter side down” and “no, you’re it!” which dissolved into a game of tag. But the most engaging debate was when Anisa convinced the entire Middle School that Elijah didn’t exist, and never had. Her opponents led off with the ‘fact’ that Elijah was sitting right there at the table, which Anisa quickly tore to shreds. An excellently made Powerpoint followed leaving many of the audience convinced that Elijah didn’t exist. By the time Anisa was done with her final statement, the audience understood that Elijah, had never existed at all. The votes were unanimous: both that Anisa had won, and that no one would have the courage to debate her in the future.

Chef Combo travels thru the Denver Airport, meets the flight crew & ends up at Ole Oatman. The miner thought he was cute but didn't have enough arm strength to do the job.

Photos by Sammie Clevenger and Jeff Clevenger

Next, Chef Combo had a conversation with a wild burro.

Then he was off to the Santa Monica Pier. He had left his swim suit back in Indiana so didn't go in the water.

Chef Combo was curious about a car with funny letters on it. The Policemen thought Chef Combo was suspicious. It was the sun glasses. When the police asked for his ID he pulled a tag out of his pocket. It said "Made in China."

Suddenly the Chef became upset, "How could this be, I was born in Italy, 7 generations all from the same village, Faeto. Mamma mia, this is a disaster."

Naomi's Boy Band, One Infection

One Infection is sweeping through the school like an epidemic. The infected (the name for super-fans of the band) are being treated with sensory deprivation (except for the sound of their hit single, 'You Dont Know You're Really Cool.')

Lead singer Naomi Gorman said the band is going on a three continent tour in the Harmony busses. "We're starting in Antarctica, the penguins love us!"

Life Emerges From Upstairs Microwave

After over-heating a mixture of Ramen noodles and popcorn, a creature emerged from the microwave. "I just wanted to see what would happen!" exclaimed Carter. Scientists speculate that the creature's organ and muscle structure are made up of popcorn and noodles, while the blood is entirely edible, in theory, said Sam, "but I wouldn't recommend it..."

Staff-Student Basketball Game

"We had a plan" said student Elijah Middleton, "We were going to sub-in every 45 seconds, keeping fresh legs in the game. And since there was no limit to team members we recruited the entire ECP and first and second grade to play. We planned for all players to run circles around the teacher's legs. But when Kelli got off that monster dunk midway through the first quarter, it kind of threw us off. And the twenty-minute wait to fix the rim didn't help." It turned ugly after that no passing, real playground ball. Zeca (14 points, 9 rebounds, 21 assists) started talking trash. "I'm no choirboy but some of the stuff was pretty rough," said Elijah. Needless to say to the teachers won the game.

Boffers Demand Gizzard Article

An organization of students known as “The Boffers” demands recognition. When they heard that the Gizzard wouldn’t include an article about them, they demanded to see one of the Yearbook staff. “We didn’t even know who they were,” said Gizzard writer Keller McKean. “Next thing I knew a group of Boffers had me on the ground whalloping me with their padded sticks. If it wasn’t for my brother who used Kung-Fu I don’t know what would have happened. Yep, Ian’s 10th degree blackbelt training sure came in handy.”

Self-Help Club A Big Success

Recently founded anger management class was a huge success due to the fact that it lessened the seething hostility amongst the 7 and 8 year olds. Students that needed special treatment stayed for an extra two days repeating the phrase "I will not hit, punch, kick, tackle, spit, elbow, headbutt, clothesline & generally be nice to other people." One of these participants was Eve Brooks, seen in the picture above. Eve said, "I no longer have hostile feelings toward other people. I especially liked the chapter P.S no more B.S. It seems that it has worked because the students used "I messages" when they left the room.

Jaylin Carried Off by Owl!

In an odd twist of fate, owl lover, Jaylin Boone was carried off by the very thing he loved the most! "Oh dear! I was in the middle of a dub step dance when suddenly I find myself in the grips of a glaucidium gnoma!!" He was found two weeks later in a nest 10 miles away. Somehow in a matter of weeks he became mentally insane, always wanting mice for breakfast, rabbits for lunch and voles for dinner. The good news is that he can now swivel his head 360 degrees.

Griffin Makes Home Out of Microwave for Rainbow Dash

Last Friday, Griffin decided to try to make his friend, Rainbow Dash, feel at home at Harmony. Griffin designated the upstairs microwave, by the Middle School, to be the star from the show My Little Pony's home. Griffin was said to be making arrangements for the pony with rainbow banners and "such". While Griffin and others were fanboying, another group was not so happy. They wanted the pony gone because it was taking up the upstairs microwave. Some pointed out that they could just walk downstairs. The anti-pony group wittily shot back with, "We're lazy." The pony's home still remains unsure, but there is a constant rainbow outside, and everyone seems more happy in general, so I guess Rainbow Dash is doing something!

Increasingly Worried Seventh Grader Hasn't Yet Come Across Any Guacamole In Burrito

His face displaying mounting distress with each successive bite, Harmony seventh grader Abel Patch is nearly halfway through his burrito without yet having encountered any trace of guacamole, sources indicated Wednesday.

"No, hold on, something's not right; I'm not seeing any green. Where is it? Where's the goddamn guacamole?" Abel reportedly said, growing more concerned by the second as he repeatedly failed to strike the pocket of avocado-based sauce that ought to lie somewhere within the tortilla. "I'm pretty sure I ordered guac. No, I definitely did. So where the hell is it? Christ, there's not much of this thing left, is there? Oh, this is bad. This is very bad."

Duncan's Letter to Santa

Dear Santa,

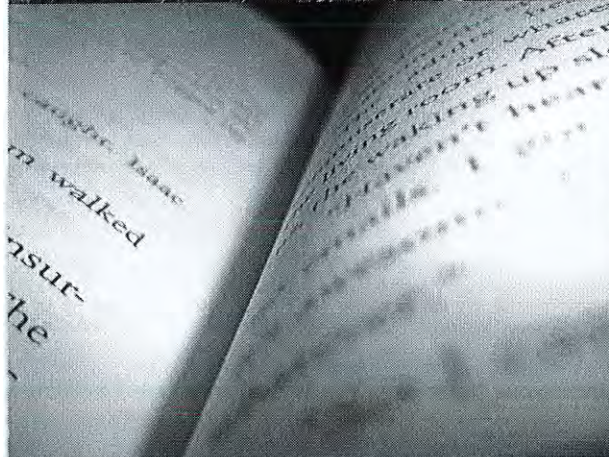

This year I have been an especially good boy! I have only had the minor accident involving the cliff and world domination... But anyway let us cut the chitchat, this year I would like you to acquire for me (in anyway possible) an apple, some chocolate, a few million dollars, that toy gun I saw last week at the target, a football, complete and utter world control, a few comics of all the superheroes in DC, and maybe, (because I'm feeling generous) maybe you could help my parents out? They have been a bit disturbed by my maniacal cackling from the basement, and my minor "obsession" with "school science" projects. Also it's been hard on them tied up next to the boiler, while my plans for world domination are put into effect.

With Much Love,
Duncan Thompson

Conclusion: Despite what we may think, our lives occupy fairly small worlds. It's an adventure that takes us out of our element. As always, putting out this book has been an adventure or sorts. We want to thank the yearbook staff, particularly Oliver who took on the responsibility of editor. Kudos to Taylor for the bulk of the photography, also thanks to the graphics, gizzard, and advertising crews. Also thanks to Peter, Amy, and Anna who assisted. And big thanks to the students who displayed enthusiasm in taking up the challenge of what constitutes adventure
