LOVE RULES

I believe I was in a night market in Taipei, a bit dazed by the cultural divide I was experiencing. Here, before me, was a flurry of signage I couldn't read, people talking in languages I couldn't grasp, strange items whose purpose escaped me & fruit, lots and lots of fruit. This was no ordinary fruit...some had spikes, some looked like it was on fire, and some had tentacles & claws. It was then that I noticed a young lady walking towards me wearing a t-shirt with big letters that read "LOVE RULES." Huh, I thought, love, that universal feeling that transcends cultures here in Taipei--that would make a good theme for the 2015 yearbook.

Now, 9 months later, the concept came to a fork in the road--most students (& teachers) chose the LOVE side of the equation, but some opted for the RULE part. Some of the rule people chose the verb form as "to rule" over something. Some rule people chose the noun form as exemplified by the "Golden Rule." And finally, another option emerged, the literal, as in actual "love rules," or its opposite, that love shouldn't have any rules.

So, a simple t-shirt can speak volumes & in this book you get a taste of what speaks to us. Let me give you a hint--people really love their pets.

The Office of HRH The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and HRH Prince Henry of Wales

Private and Confidential

4th March, 2015

Dear Students,

The Duchess of Cambridge has asked me to thank you for your letter of 5th February requesting a signed photograph for your school's yearbook.

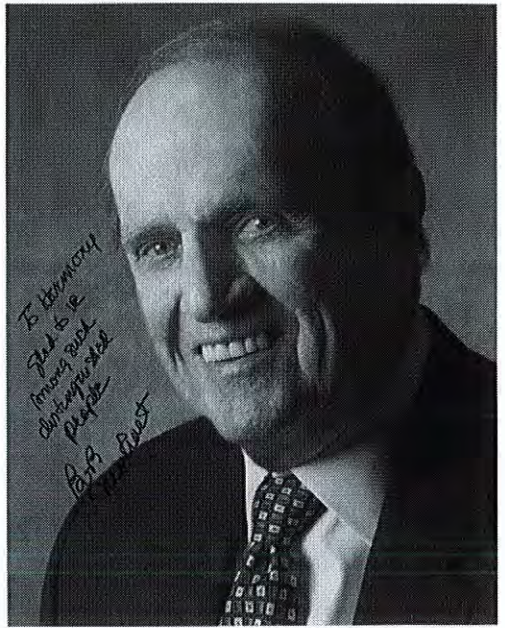

It was so kind of you to take the trouble to write as you did, but I regret that due to the large number of similar requests she receives Her Royal Highness has had to make it a rule only to give a signed photograph to people known personally to her.

I am sure you will agree that it would be unfair to make any exception to this rule. Therefore, I have to tell you that it is not possible for The Duchess of Cambridge to do as you ask.

I am sorry to send you such a disappointing reply. Nevertheless, Her Royal Highness has asked me to pass on her best wishes to everyone at Harmony School.

Yours sincerely,

"love rules"

my eyes wander outside the window towards the rain
the sky has a blue day; I think that it is crying perhaps the birds broke it's heart as they flew across leaving the other pieces of the sky behind

tears stream down the window
the trees wait for the birds to come home
what if they were tired of waiting?
how does the sky feel as the birds fly away?
how do the trees feel when the birds don't come home?

who said that love waits? or that we get over it?
yet we wait and wander for so long
and then we hide

why don't we let go like the sky?

why are there "love rules"?

Dale Hartkemeyer, Spanish instructor

Rules of grammar, cross-linguistically

An important part of acquiring a foreign language, aside from learning lots of new vocabulary, is learning and applying the grammar rules of the language you're studying. Students sometimes find this aspect of language—the rules—burdensome, but I think of them the way I think of traffic regulations we learn in driving. They allow the flow of communication between users of a language to proceed smoothly and efficiently, in just the way that obeying traffic rules and signals facilitates the flow of drivers on the streets and prevents collisions (communication breakdowns).

Let's take a very simple example of a grammar rule. In English many yes/no questions are formulated by inserting the dummy verbs do/does/did in front of a statement.

statement: Her friends like to skate.
yes/no-question: Do her friends like to skate?

One way of indicating questions in French uses a similar rule that inserts Est-ce que in front of a statement.

statement: Marie parle l'italien. Marie speaks Italian.
yes/no-question: Est-ce que Marie parle l'italien? Does Marie speak Italian?

In a similar way, a rule of Japanese requires a question to be indicated by ka at the end. So ka is like a spoken question mark.

statement: Yuko-ga oyogimasu. Yuko swims.
yes/no-question: Yuko-ga oyogimasu ka. Does Yuko swim?

In contrast, Spanish, as well as a number of other languages, has a rule that inverts the word order of the subject and the verb to indicate a yes/no-question.

statement: Pedro nada. Pedro swims.
yes/no-question: ¿Nada Pedro? Does Pedro swim?

Italian, German, and Swedish, among other languages, have similar rules for yes/no-question formation.

statement: Maria parla italiano. Maria speaks Italian.
yes/no-question: Parla Maria italiano? Does Maria speak Italian?

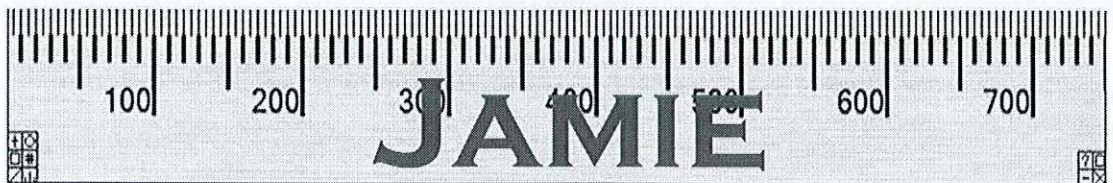

statement: Dein Bruder kommt heute. Your brother is coming today.
yes/no-question: Kommt dein Bruder heute? Is your brother coming today?

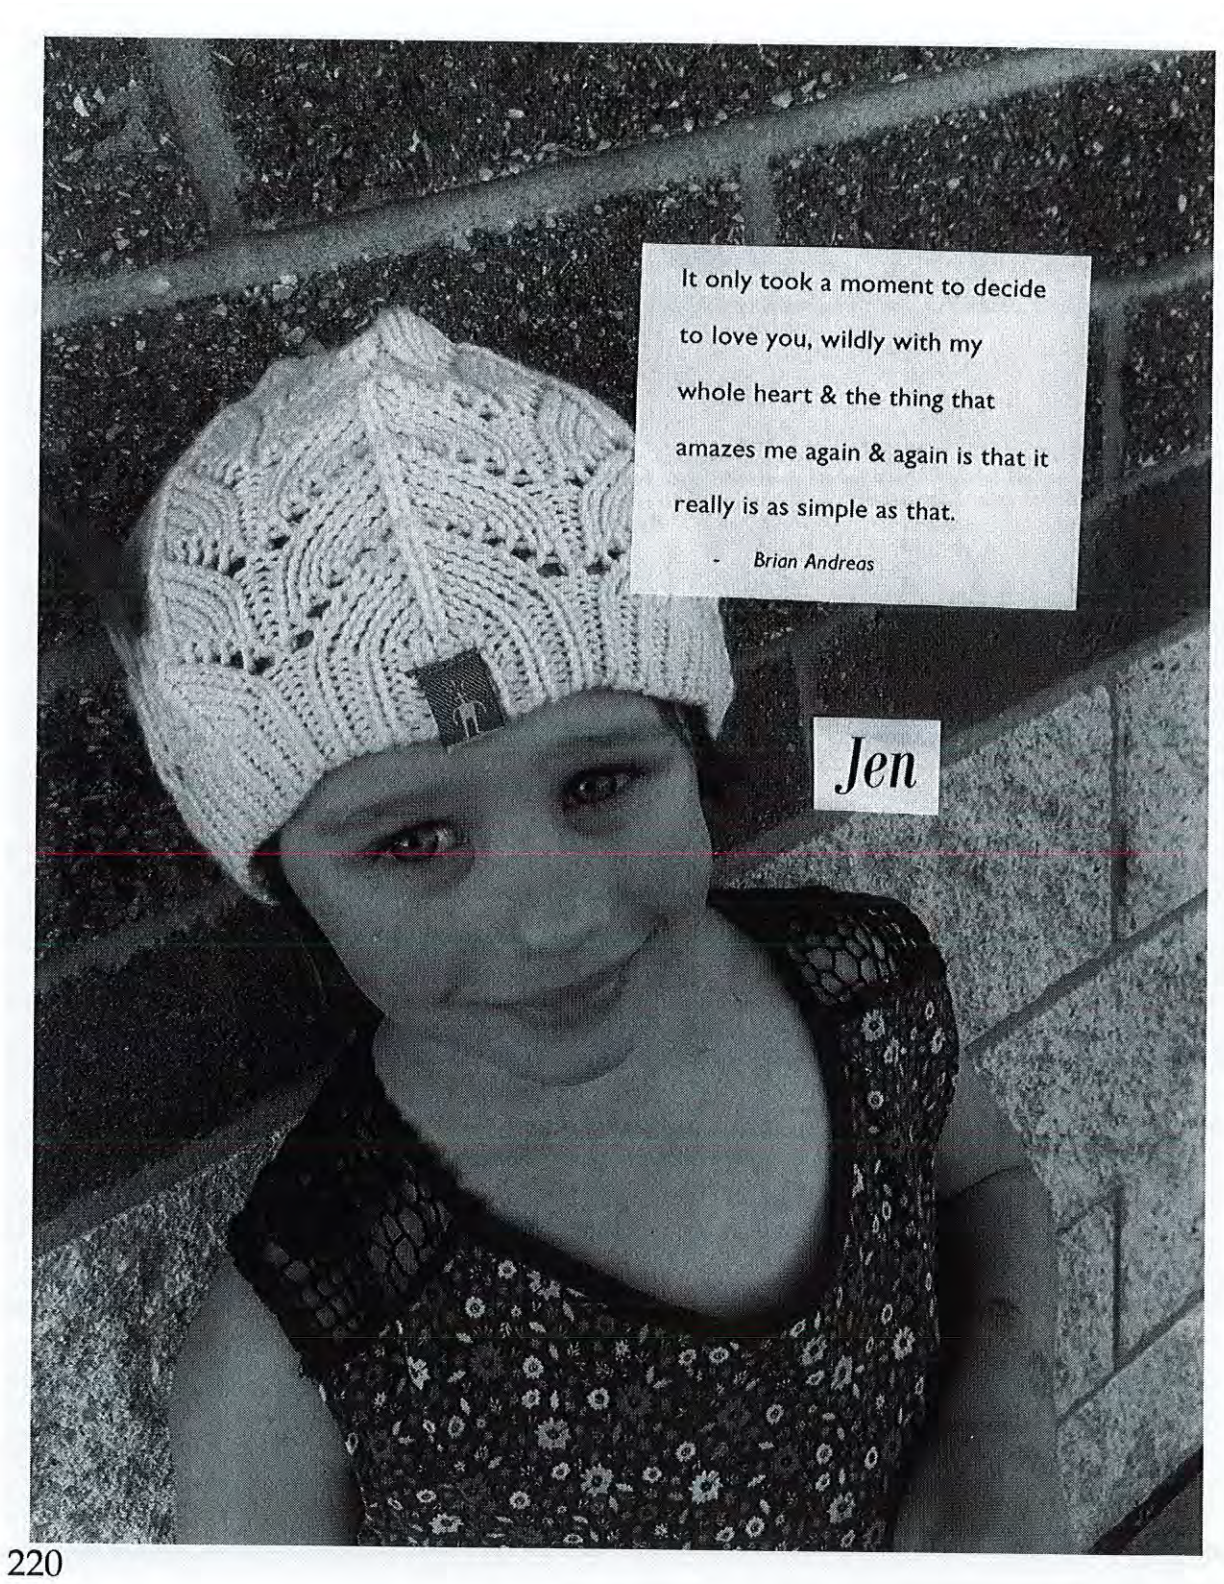

statement: Josephin skriver brev. Josephin writes letters.
yes/no-question: Skriver Josephin brev? Does Josephin write letters?

Acquiring a command of the various grammar rules of a language you're studying is a major part of achieving real competency in that language. So try not to look at rules as something annoying, but as the core of what you want and need to master. And if you do, before long you'll be thinking in and using the language like a native speaker!

¡Vivan las reglas!

I discovered John Coltrane's music in 6th grade when my brother brought an album home from college. It was late period Coltrane (Live at the Village Vanguard Again) & the music was gruff & to the casual listener, may have sounded not like music at all. I loved it. I talked my parents into renting me a saxophone--first a tenor, which for some reason (?), they stopped payment on & one day a guy from the store showed up at our door & wanted the horn back. That was ok because I wanted a soprano. It just so happened the local music store sold cheap Italian saxes, brand new for $225. It wasn't a particular good horn, but it was a soprano. I spent years learning to play "correctly". When at IU I began playing with some guys who didn't care about playing correctly. They assembled instruments out of clarinet parts, car hoses, and assorted clamps. In truth the instruments were incapable of playing a scale, let alone a tune. But they were wonderfully expressive and employed extended techniques that the jazz world would whole-heartedly endorse some twenty years later. I've used those sounds as the basis of my playing,

Music is easy to love--but what else: family, traveling, the original Superman tv show, Tai food, kimchi, the internet, my cat, Car 54 Where Are You, wood burning stoves, Italian lighting, mid century design, fruit in Taipei street markets Cathedrals just about anywhere Lum & Abner radio shows, my father visiting me in dreams, snow days, Canyon De Chelly, art museums, a good subway system, a well struck golf shot, New Yorker cartoons, bass accordions, big cities, rain forests, road trips, work, talking with my wife, cooking garlic with spinach, white sauce on pizza, with red onions, exercise, saving money, etc.

1st and 2nd grader eat lunch

A monumental event happened a few days ago as the 1st and 2nd grade had lunch. This surprising development sparked much controversy among the 3rd and 4th grades as they debated the possible implications of such a development. "It's not like it's that special. I mean we do it every lunch time" said Lars Stevens, a 1st/2nd grader. But the scandal truly exploded last afternoon when the 5th and 6th grades were spotted also eating lunch. And now there are rumors that people eat pizza for lunch every Thursday! This story is truly shocking to everyone and has potentially world shaking implications, like, what if everyone got an hour or so in the middle of each day in which they could eat lunch? But perhaps the most surprising thing is...

Tosh Still Wants His Goddamn Pi

Earlier this week Tosh was finally presented with his pi. It was handed to him on a silver platter by Roc, himself. Tosh refused this gesture saying, "After thinking it over, I never wanted pi." Once he proclaimed this, a great cry of "hhhhhhhhhuuuugh" went up from the surrounding crowd. And the math teacher who worked so hard calculating Tosh's number nearly strangled him. After all this ruckus, Tosh said that he wanted a cake. So a crack team of baking beavers...

Middle School Lounge Haunted by Boring Ghosts

Two middle schoolers who were bored to death during class have been forever cursed to haunt the place of their death as boring ghosts. Their daily activities include reading the newspaper, discussing the stock market and listening to audio tapes of "Pride and Prejudice". There has been a forced evacuation of the middle school lounge as the ghosts produce a boring aura which no living mortal can withstand. Priests were brought in to perform an exorcism...continued on page 345

Fionn Wins Halloween Costume Parade Again

“It was a simple matter of making a deal with a certain person,” Fionn reported, “Marty said if I won the JD Award three times it would be renamed the JD-FIONN Award & that would be sweet. I signed a little piece of paper and presto chango I’m this cool skeleton.” The judges, however, awarded top prize to a kid who made a Little Bub costume out of dryer lint. Oh well, there’s always next year.

Gizzard Editors debate spelling of Errol Flynn

Roslyn: So, Maybe I should change my password to errolflynn because nobody knows how to spell it.

Jaylin: Yes I can.

Roslyn: Oh really?

Jaylin: (Nods head)

Roslyn: Off the top of your head?

Jaylin: Er l?

Abi: Err l?

Jaylin: Errle?

Jaylin: Erre...E rri...Erra....Erru?

Julien: Maybe it doesn't have two R's.

Jaylin: Are there two R's?

Roslyn: Yep

Jaylin: Erre... Erril... Erra....u l?

Roslyn: There's one vowel you haven't mentioned yet.

Jaylin: Erril...Errul.o l!

Roslyn: There you go! Now spell "Flynn."

Jaylin: F l y n

Roslyn: Nope.

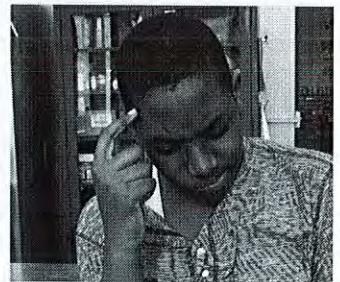

Julien: F l y n n

Jaylin (shouts over Julien):

F l y n n!

Roslyn: There you go! Now spell it again.

Jaylin: E r r...DANG IT!

YOUTH COMMUNITY

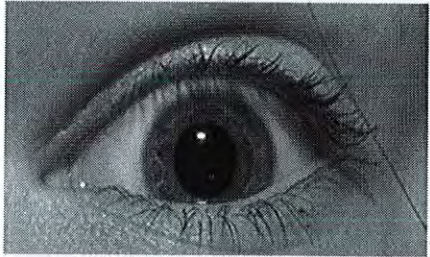

Our Tuesday meetings take place at the Unitarian Universalist Church of Bloomington (2120 N. Fee Ln.). We typically have a discussion topic each week that we focus on.

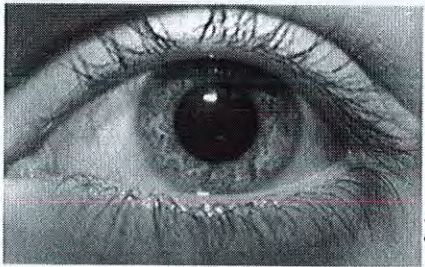

Thursday meetings are more social in nature where we plan a fun activity or just hang out. Typically, we meet at Rachael's Cafe (300 E. 3rd St.) but occasionally, depending on our activity, we might meet elsewhere. So keep an eye on our Facebook page for our location!

The Gizzard's Tips for Tornado Safety

- 1) Go to the roof
- 2) If you end up in Oz tap your feet together two times & repeat "There's no place like home."
- 3) To avoid flying debris try to avoid flying debris.
- 4) If you hear distant rumbling, it's probably a train.
- 5) If you are panicking, just remember it could be worse, you could be hang gliding.
- 6) If pigs are flying, there is a tornado & you should run for your life.
- 7) Should there be sharks in the tornado, always make sure that you can run faster than your friend.
- 8) If the tornado has picked up a large amount of porcupines, you're completely screwed.
- 9) When you think the tornado has ended be sure you're not the first person to go up & check.

Nora Photobombs the Doctor

High School student Nora Barber traveled on the rhino with the help of Morgan Freeman to see her doctor when she made a wrong turn at Albuquerque and ended up seeing the wrong doctor. She thought “What the hey! I’ll take this opportunity to photobomb Doctor Who.” He immediately offered me a ride in his new TARDIS and I said, “No thanks, I’ve got a floating rhino instead.”

Bad Luck Club

Do you like winning at everything you play? Do you like being at the right place at the right time? Do you like being popular with your schoolmates? If so, this is not the club for you! The Bad Luck Club or BLC for short, practice bad luck rituals to increase your bad luck! The leader, Ted Mullin, has a record of 1,034,812,964 years, and counting, of bad luck. His motto, "Bad luck is good luck that is deadly!" Ironically, through the years of his profession, Ted has had 146 major concussions, 59 trees have fallen on him, crashed in 12 planes, got into the middle of 53 bank robberies, not to mention all the oil spills he's caused and countless records of ripping the fabric of reality. But through all this, you might ask "How many members are there?" Well, we're glad to report that we have 23 members! (Who happen to have died 30 years ago). Poor guys. Griffin got struck (twice in the same place) by lightning. Julien got run over by a train that somehow left the track. Chef Combo spontaneously combusted and Eve, oh Eve, got sucked into a black hole that escaped space. Shane, the deputy of the club, won the lottery and the universe wasn't too happy about that, so it erased Shane from existence. Now, no one remembers him. Sorry, who were we talking about just now? Anyway, all the other memories are just too painful to explain. Ted is the only surviving member, so come and join to play wonderful games such as Dodge the Black Cat, Break That Mirror, Burn the Four Leaf Clover!, or classics such as Blackjack Under the Ladder, or How Long Can You Survive on Friday the 13th. You'll never regret it.

In conclusion: I hold it true, whate'er befall;
 I feel it when I sorrow most;
 'Tis better to have loved and lost
 Than never to have loved at all.

That was Alfred Lord Tennyson's take on the subject. Certainly love carries certain hazards. The nature of the world is impermanence. We know that yet we continue to form attachments-to people, to things, to animals, to ideas. This book reflects that & the priorities we make in taking the journey. So, after careful consideration, we say.... go for it, but get yourself a Tychem BR440/450 medium weight B-level protective coverall, 25mil 14inch butyl rubber gloves, Bata HazMax 17inch Overboot & lots of Chemical tape & you'll be just fine.

Thanks to staff & students of Harmony School, Anna Riback, Mr. Copy, Peter Samuelson and that young lady in Taiwan.
