A close-up photograph of a wooden surface, possibly a table or desk, with numerous water droplets scattered across it. A single pink flower with five petals is in focus on the right side, its stem and leaves also visible. The lighting is soft, creating a warm and slightly blurred background.

Predictable: Able to be foretold or declared in advance.

We didn't predict this, but students approached the topic in one of two ways:

- 1.) Predictions about themselves
- 2.) Predictions about the world

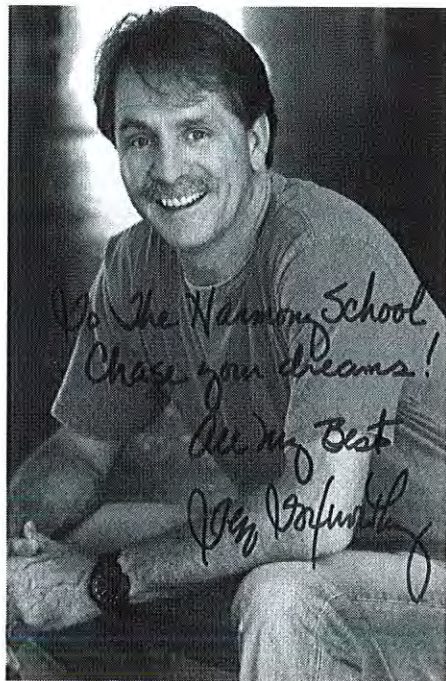

As to predictions about themselves, they want to be Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, doctors, Super Mario, a teenager, a cobbler, a paleontologist, a Star Wars pilot, a princess, a rainbow bunny, a rock climber, a lego worker, a football player...etc They also wanted to be stamped by pigs, embarrassed, die, fall, come out of the closet, be rich and famous, be wanted, fly with pegasus, and so...many...more...

For those who predicted changes in the world, we have: flying babies, flying cars, hover shoes, time machines, exploding worlds, droids, the ability to fly without wings, evil babies, unicorns returning, dogs driving, deforestation, humans evolving to intelligent chickens, anime characters coming back to life, the world dying in a fiery hell....etc

Hmm...Perhaps..

LOGAN BURDESHAW

My Prediction

-Fionn Connelly

They say never to judge a book by its cover. I didn't... That's how the world ended. It started in 2085. The world was pretty much the same as fifty years ago. We were progressing and all at an alarming rate when the economy collapsed. There was a revolution, worldwide. It was world war three. Except it was not countries fighting other countries. It was a civil war. A world wide civil war. We were successful. It was supposed to be a golden age. Except it wasn't. It's true we all had been enlightened. We had seen the worst of humanity. We had seen what personal greed could do to a person. So we burned our money. Made sure no one could ever have too much, or too little. However, while we were all concentrating on making an equality, the world was going to shit. It was too late. We couldn't come up with solutions fast enough, or good enough. We were overrun with killer bees. So we devised a pesticide specifically designed to target their DNA. As it turned out they had just a couple of DNA similarities to us. Doesn't sound that bad, right? Hee hee hee, boy would you be wrong.

So anyway, the world went to shit. Mass deaths. Dictatorships and so on. I wasn't anyone important, just some kid working a factory job. I live in Hemley. I think it used to be called... Oh yeah, York New city was its name. Well doesn't matter any more. Now the stupid Hemley line owns it. The only thing I like to do is read. I'm better at it than all my friends. (Well truth be told, they don't know how to read at all.) There isn't much writing around any more so I just find what scraps I can. Wonder who wrote them? I wondered what it would be like to write something myself. That was nice. Getting lost in an instruction manual or something. Those are some of my best memories. But you know what my family has? A book! Yeah, with real paper and everything! I had just been itching to get my hands on it. Apparently it was thousands of years old. My grandmother said I couldn't though. She said that it was evil. She's 80 years old and is on the council of elders. They're like the underground government of the people. They are all super old. I hoped to live past fifty too, although I knew how unlikely it was. So don't get me wrong, I respect my grandmother a lot. But this is a REAL book we're talking about here. So I got up in the dead of night and slipped it off its shelf. Tension gathering, I opened to the first page. My heart dropped to the pit of my stomach. The writing was in symbols I was unfamiliar with. I slumped against the wall and sank down to the floor with a small displacement of dust. I started to cry. Would I never know the glory of a true book? With a soft tap my tear seeped into the pages. I looked down. Had I breathed too much factory air? The ink was melting and reforming. It, it, it was! I could read it now. It read:

"I felt your tears. They were ones due to unknowing sadness... an ignorance to joy. You read but not for pleasure but for an escape to somewhere else... Anywhere else."

I had broken a sweat but hardly noticed. Were all real books like this? No they couldn't be. What if it was evil? Maybe, and yet it seemed to know so much about me. It was comforting to have some one know. But how much does it know? I decided to keep reading.

"I know all about you; your desires although few, your dreams although grey, your life although dismal. Your ambitions, GREAT!

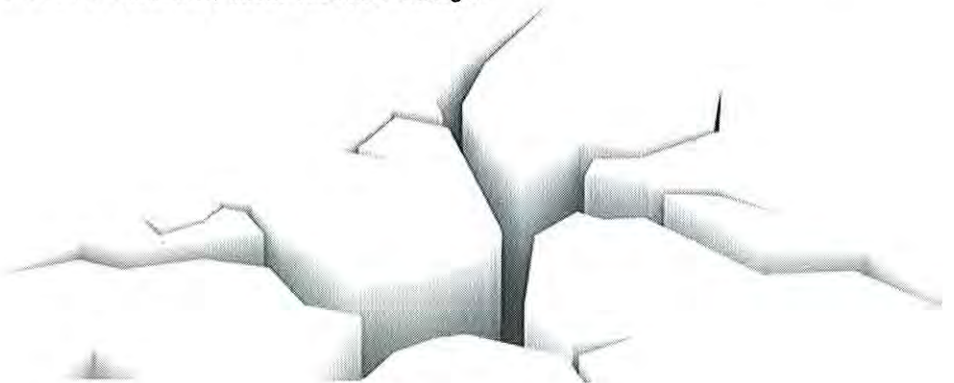

Ambitions. I've never had any ambitions. I mean where would that get me? Nowhere, that's where.

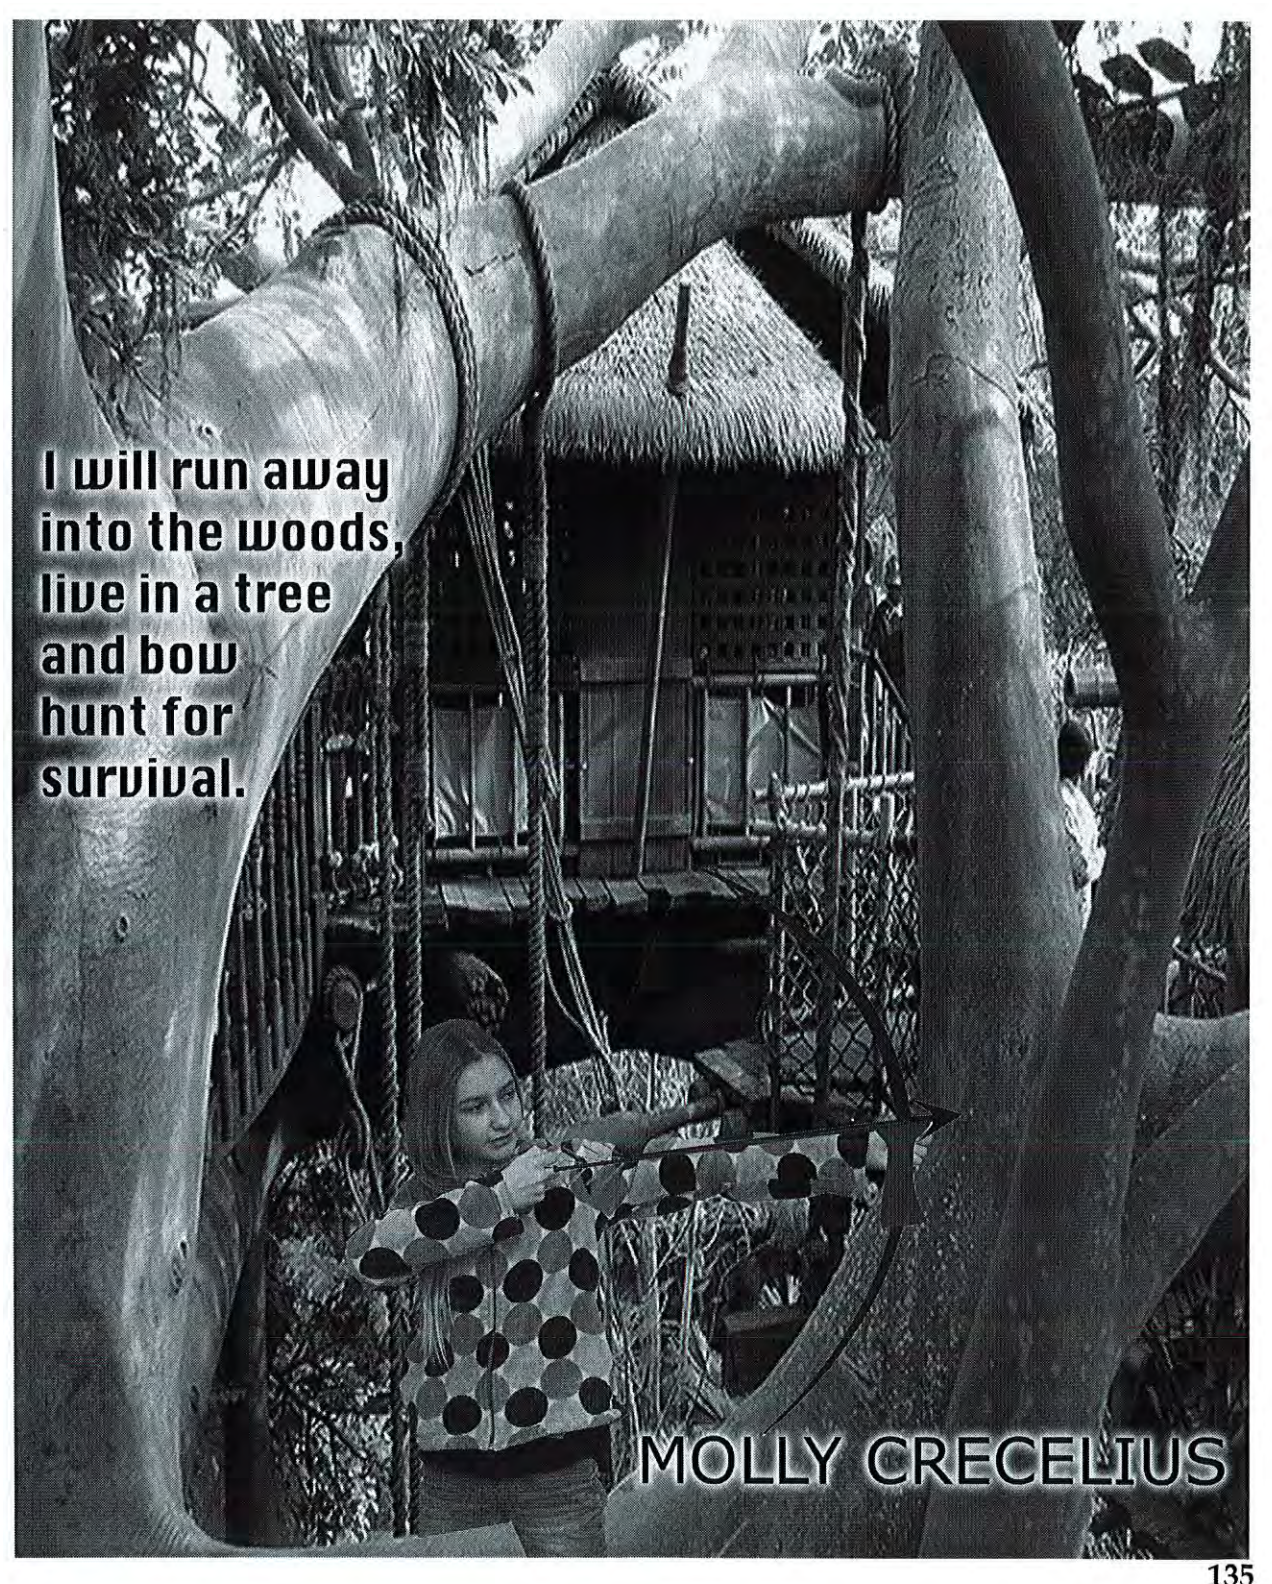

"Ahhhhhh there, you are wrong. You have ALWAYS had ambitions. Would you like me to tell them to you?"

I couldn't stop reading now. I knew I had no ambitions. But up until now he had described my life in such profound beauty.

"You want Change. Change to anything else. The world is such a hell. You want change... You couldn't realize because you had never seen anything different. But somehow you knew, beyond all odds that things would not always be how you had known them... Now, take my hand."

"Yes change, change, that's all I need. Change. Everything's gonna be alright. That's all I could say as I extended my hand down to the face of the book. He understands and now I understood. All would be alright. I made contact. At first nothing happened, then I saw the sun rise. I went over to the window. And saw the bright new light of the future blazing red on the horizon. I could see our tyrants' heads on spikes. And next to them... My parents' faces staring blankly. No...no...no. This couldn't be! The planet crust cracked and fire prevailed. The world crumbled. This was not earth this, this... This was change.

Sarah Abrell

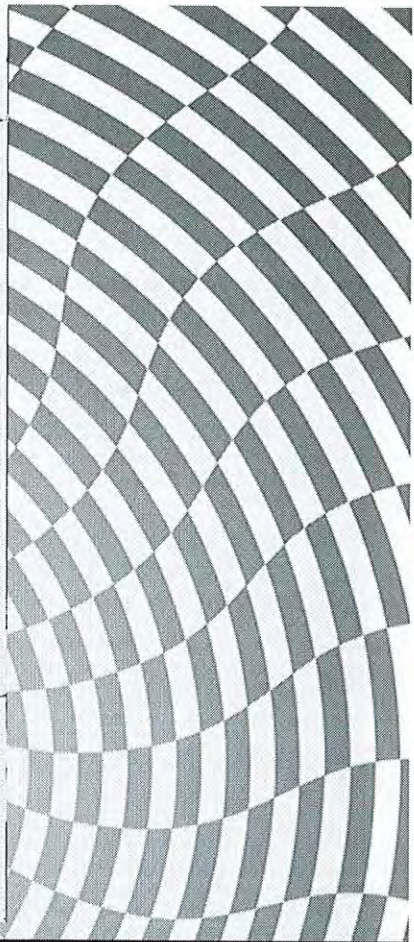

Sarah interned at the Julian Center in Indianapolis, for her senior project. The Julian Center is a Domestic Violence shelter for abused women and men. Sarah spent from 25-35 hours a week doing many different jobs, such as: childcare, preparing meals, going to the woman's group meetings, researching merchandise, organizing, creating event invitations, tutoring young kids, and helping put fundraisers together. Her essential question was: "How does domestic violence impact society as a whole? What is the best prevention?" Sarah will be going to IU after high school, where she plans to study nursing.

Ciabhan Connelly

One of Ciabhan Connelly's greatest interests is to understand the cause and effect of political decisions. He believes that being well-informed about the consequences of one's vote is one of the responsibilities of citizens in a democracy. Because of this, he chose to spend his senior project traveling around Western Europe and interviewing people of many different nationalities and backgrounds to find out how they felt about the European Union. Ciabham will attend the Hutton Honors College at IU this fall and intends to pursue political activism and journalism in the future.

Anisa Curry Vietze

is looking towards things to come.

Tommy Flinn

For his project, Thomas built a low-budget, four-wheel drive, manual truck, also known as a Rat-Rod. Building this truck included stripping a newer model truck down to the frame and engine, then placing a 1948 international cab on the frame. The top was then chopped, a grill added, a bed fabricated, and seats made. Controls were then hooked up and the wiring completed. The next step will be to get street legal, so he can drive it anywhere. After High School, Thomas will be building a house that the family will eventually use as a rental property.

Ever since she was in her early teens, Dylan has loved experimenting with styling and coloring hair. For her senior project, she attended the Indiana Cosmetology Academy, where she worked towards getting her cosmetology certification. Her classes covered cutting, coloring, and styling, as well as facials, manicures, pedicures, and waxing. After graduation, Dylan will return to beauty school to complete her certification.

I researched "formal systems", a part of logic/math that deals with the base rules used to calculate things. There are many different systems out there, and they all have different properties. Everything is based off of some formal system.

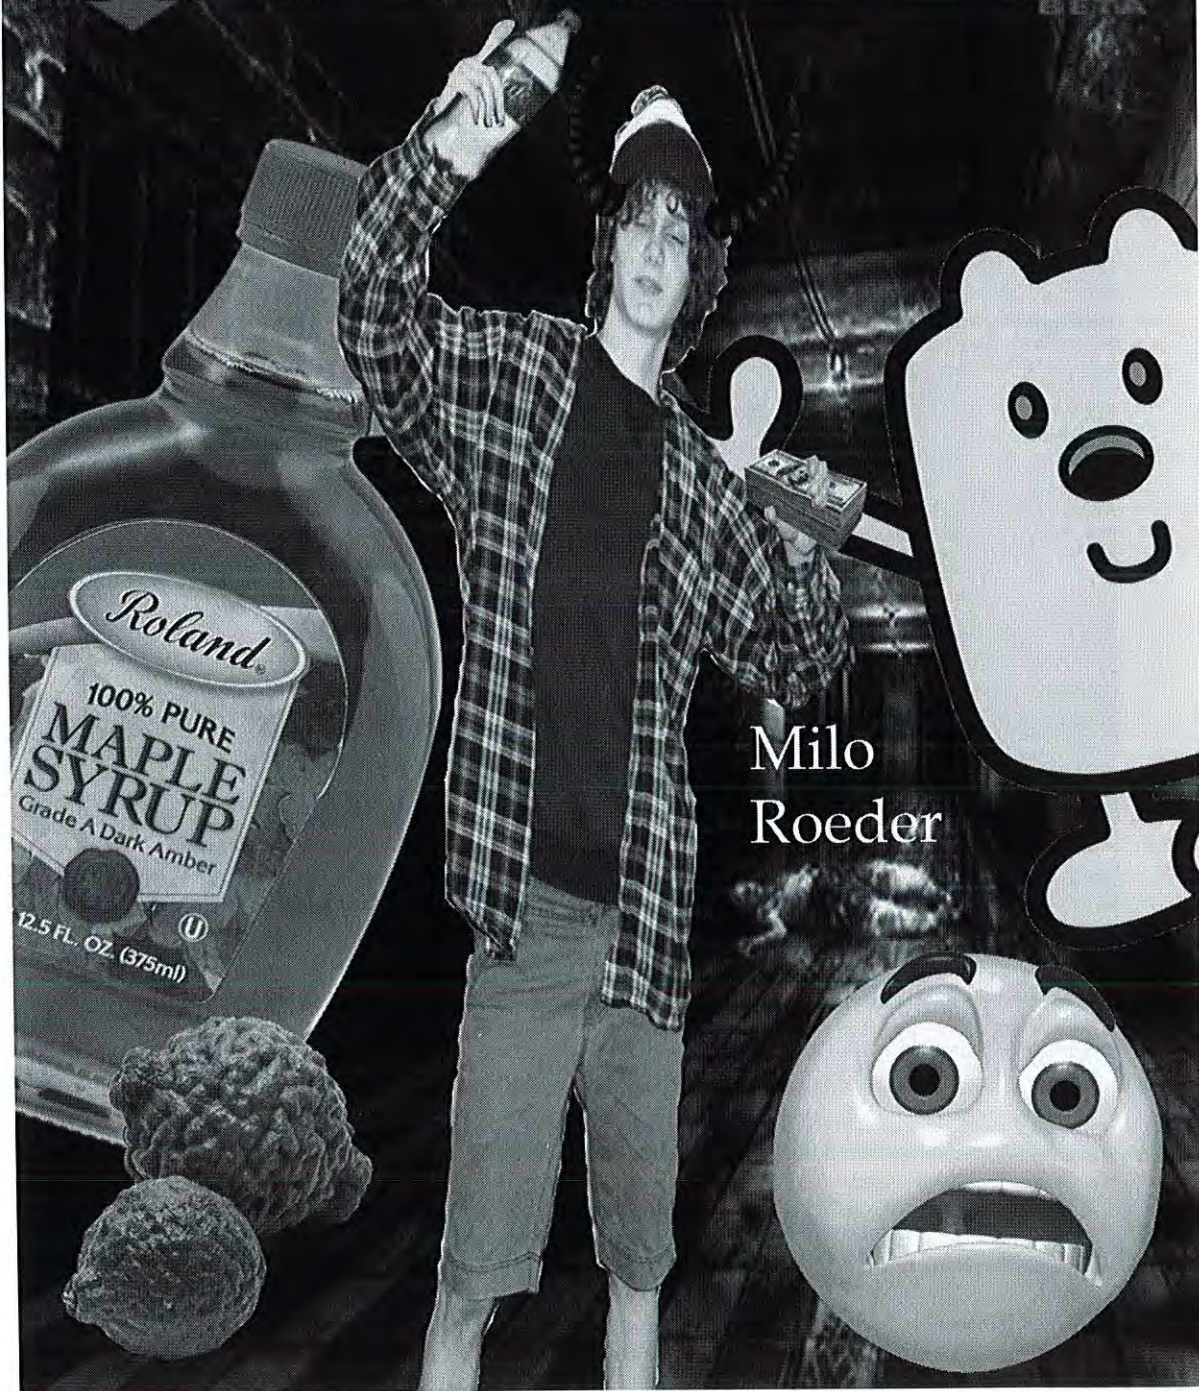

I believe that certain types of systems may be useful for mathematics, and that they may have real world benefits in computer science. I researched different formal systems, and learned about their properties.

My essential question was:

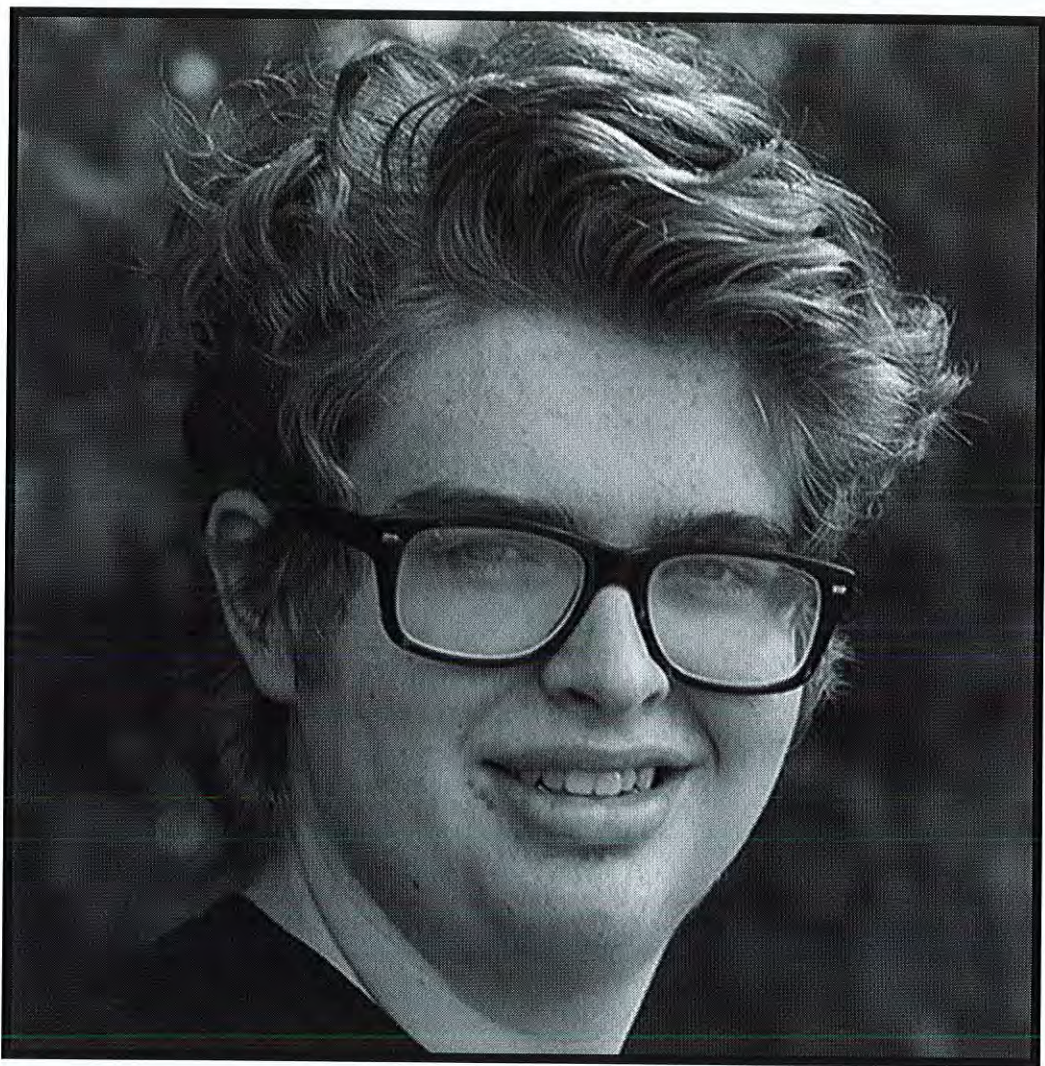

What properties may be proven about restricted formal systems, and is restricted computation a viable alternative for modern computing.

“Golden Shining Moments” Explained

Have you ever wondered where the term “Golden Shining Moments” originated? I didn’t think so. While Harmony students over the decades have used it to indicate a particularly good experience, its true origins are found in the sport of fly fishing. Harmony teacher Shane Caudell was demonstrating his casting technique to fellow teacher Andy Alphonse, when Shane placed a golden shiner, a small cyprinid fish of Eastern North America, on his hook. The golden shiner is noted for having silvery sides with bright golden reflections. When Shane caught the “big one,” he said it was his “golden shiner moment.” Andy, a stickler for grammar, changed shiner.....

大家好，好好，好好好好，今天我们来探讨一下“和谐学校”的中国留学生的生活吧。我知道，我们学校的中文名很烂，勿喷。我们的校长是一个可爱的老头，他会吹泡泡，空手吹泡泡，他的独门绝技，如果你没有看过他吹泡泡，你不算来过和谐学校。现在一共有十名中国留学生在高中部，大家洽洽洽洽地在一起学习，认真贯彻和谐的核心主义价值观。学校没有食堂，但是每周四会提供比萨，每周都是原来的配方，都是熟悉的味道，但是和谐学校的比萨无法被模仿，也无法被超越，因为我们携着一颗善良的心，认真地卖比萨，认真地为学校集钱。最后，和谐学校是一个积极向上、多元化的学校，欢迎大家的加入，谢谢大家。

That Guy Beats What's His Name in Harmony Mock Election

Harmony showed its civic pride recently when all the presidential candidates gave stirring speeches to the Harmony student body about their plans to help the nation. From global warming, to job creation, to equal rights for all, the candidates laid out their plans with clarity and vision. After the top two candidates were chosen, they debated for 30 minutes and the final votes were tallied. It was a stirring moment and Sallyann Murphey's class should be proud.

5 & 6th Graders Defeat Middle School in Soccer Challenge

“It wasn’t so much getting beat,” said Middle Schooler Griffin Bongard, “it was being shut out 123 to 0 that got my goat. Haven’t they heard of ‘calling off the dogs?’ When Amare and Zenebe combined for 23 goals in the first 3 minutes I think our coach would have pulled them to the bench in hopes of giving the other team a sporting chance. But no, the 5th & 6th graders seemed to relish each and every goal. It was as if the pent up anger of twenty years of defeat lit a fire under them. When Eli scored from his own goalie box it was sweet revenge.” The Middle Schoolers are taking the defeat in stride & vowed to never play the Soccer Challenge again.

This Whole World Is a Lie?

We humans have a pretty good grip on reality, being the only creatures capable of questioning why things are, but we may not know quite as much as we think. Knife Theory is the concept that everything is actually a knife, but our brains change what we see to cope with the ungodly pain of being cut constantly. Jeff Rickman at TIK (Texas Institute of Knives) provides evidence for his claims. "Yes, well, quantum knife theory follows the observation that Knuarks are thin enough to split the protons and neutrons in atoms. If a knife of that scale makes up everything in the universe, how do we know that our brains aren't cutting out the pain so as to avoid losing sanity?

Roc's Office Taken Over by Feral Cats

On January 12th, 2016, Roc went missing. During a thorough search, he was found cowering within a large pile of cats. Yes, I said cats--in his office. After many bites and scratches, Roc was rescued and only 7 cats escaped and are now roaming the basement corridors. After the incident, he explained how he fed a stray cat on his way to school one day, one following him to work. So, he decided to keep it. The next day, there were two more, then five, then three, etc. With the help of Pretty Kitty Kibble* we tamed the cats and they are pets for the school, even though most of them stay within the solitude of Roc's office.

Ian Accidentally Sold at High School Ruggage Sale

“How much for this scrawny teenager?” said a middle aged lady from Ellettsville.

Simon looked over worriedly saying to the lady

“Oh sorry, but he’s....”

“I’ll give you a thousand dollars for him.”

“SOLD TO THE KIND LADY,” Sam and Nora said in unison.

“But guys...”

“Oh come on Simon! We can always stay in touch,” said Nora.

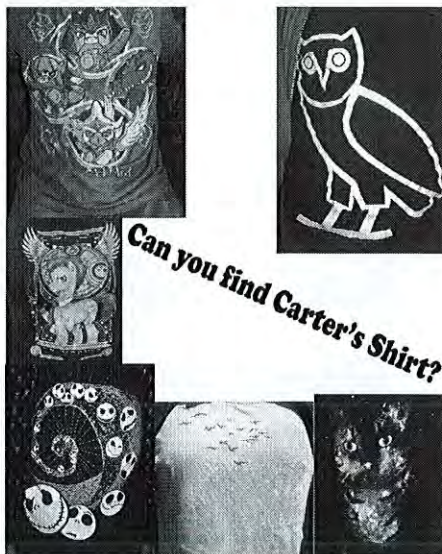

“Fine.....”

Nora took the money as Simon helped load Ian into the back of her stark white van.

“Have fun!” the teens all yelled.”

“Let’s get back to work!”

"Nothing Compares With Mother Bear's"

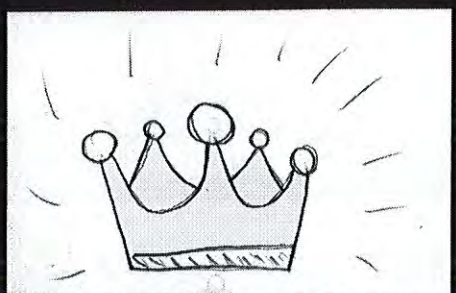

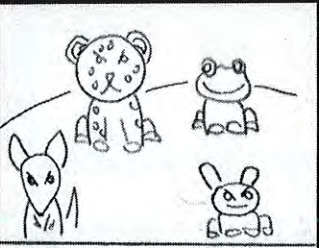

Frog decides to make a missile and fire it towards the other side of earth.

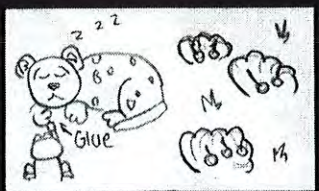

Feeling confident of its skills, cheetah chose to leap without any advantages

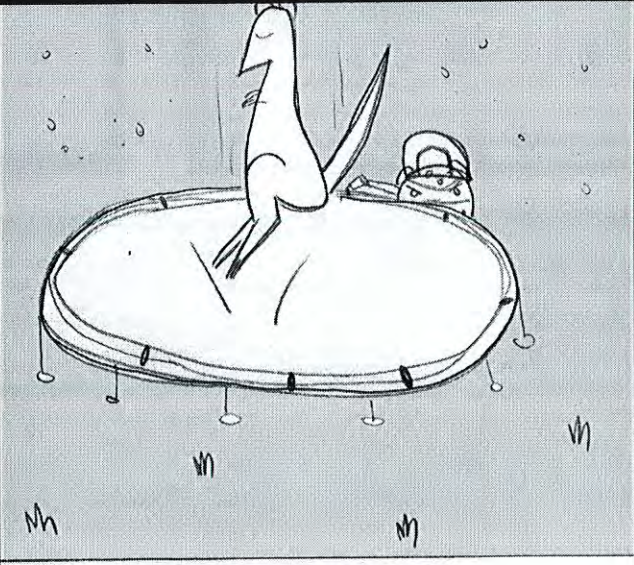

Whoever wins will get a crown they can wear for the next 4 years

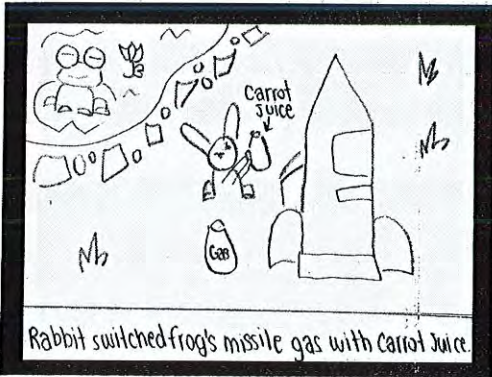

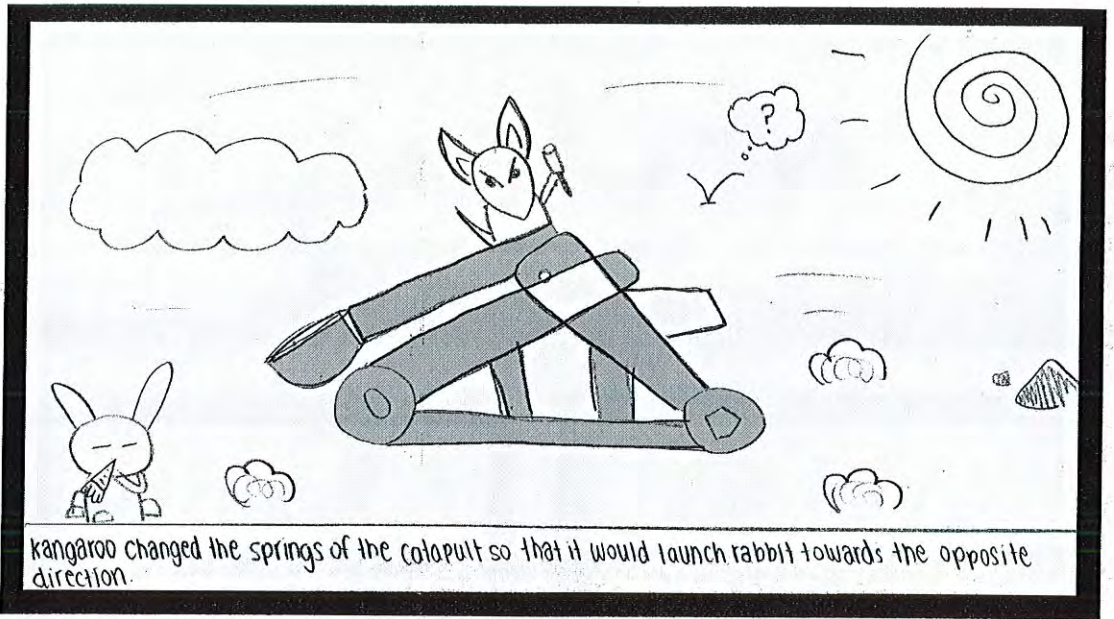

Wanting to win so bad, The animals began Sabotaging each other.

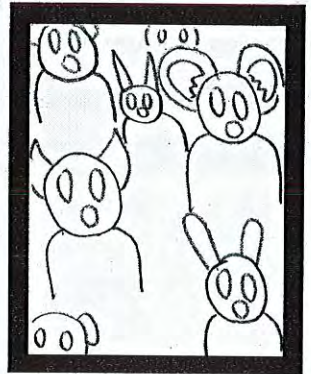

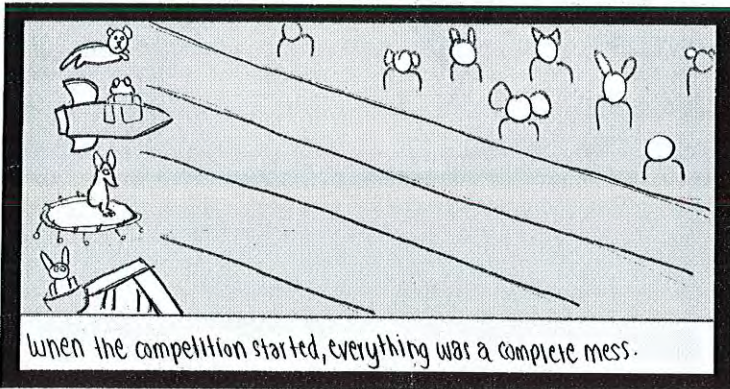

Frog puts glue on cheetah's paw.

Cheetah unscrewed the kangaroo's trampoline

Frog's missile crashed. Unfortunately, he landed on a wall.

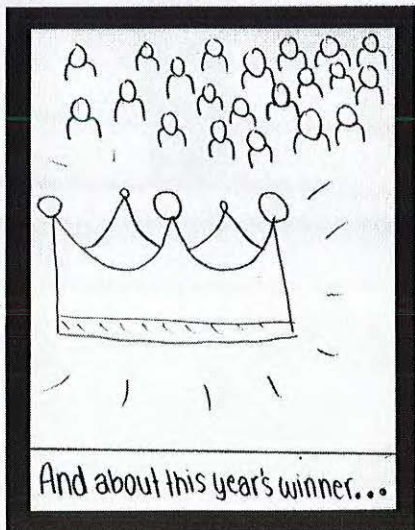

kangaroo jumped on an unscrewed trampoline and fell through.

cheetah didn't go anywhere, and rabbit plopped into a pond.

Because of their selfishness trying to ruin each other's plan, none of the animals won. Fortunately, everybody learned their lesson and hopefully nothing would go wrong on the next leap day.

And about this year's winner...

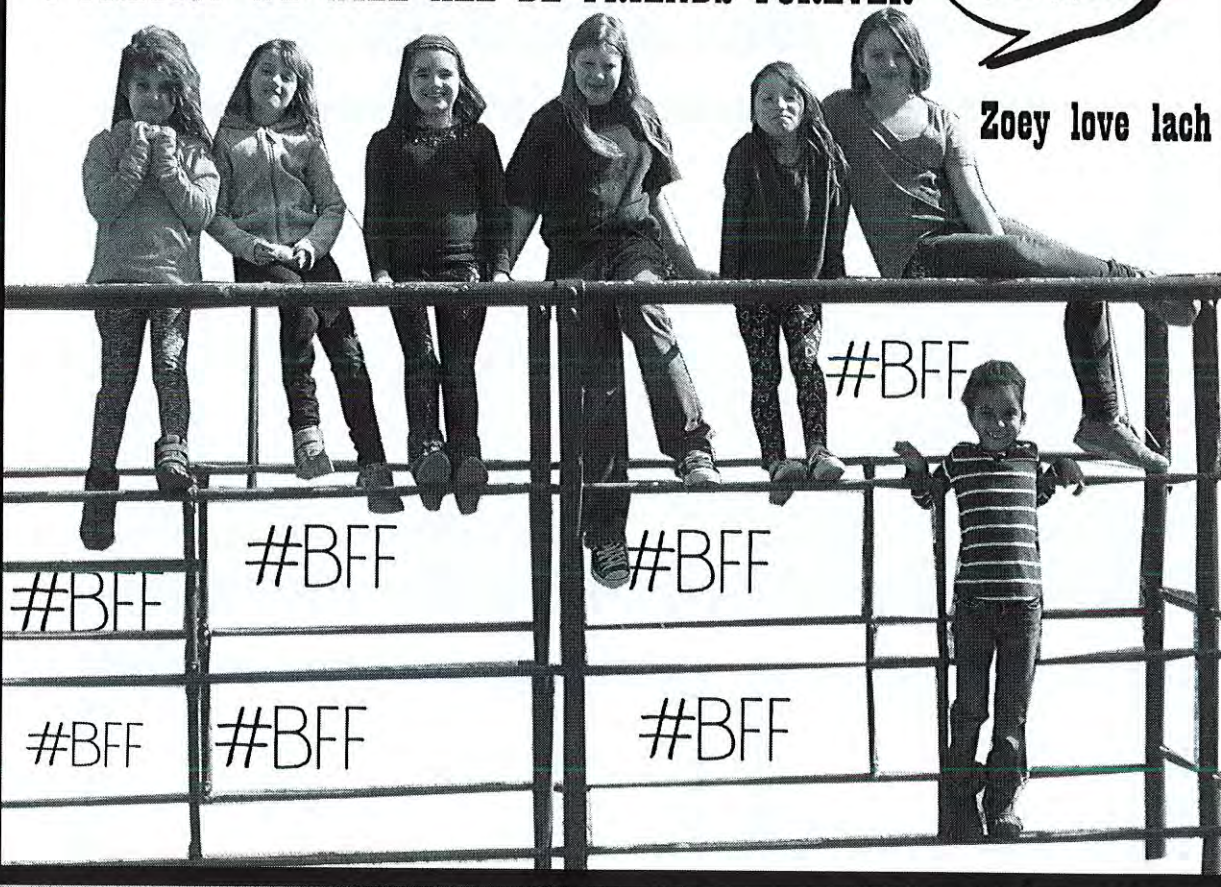

Earth won. Apparently, it leaped the longest.

Convo with Mr. Dell man

Gizzard editor and journalist TED, had an exclusive opportunity to interview Harmony superhero, Dell man, at his hideout in a computer lab.

Here is their conversation:

Ted: This conversation is being recorded.

Is that okay with you?

Mr. Dell man: Yes, yes indeed.

Ted: So you gave consent to appear in the Gizzard?

Mr Dell man: All evidence suggests so.

Ted: I'm going to need a solid yes or no.

Mr Dell man: Under most circumstances.

Ted:Oka-ay? I'll take that as a yes. Do you feel that your job is a result of poor law enforcement?

Mr. Dell man: Well, if the police were stricter, I wouldn't have an excuse to wear this Cool Mask.

Ted: Um,.. okay then. What is your response to the invasion of a spooky ghost in school?

Mr. Dell man: I will find that ghost, I will throw CDs of that ghost, and I will then end that ghost.

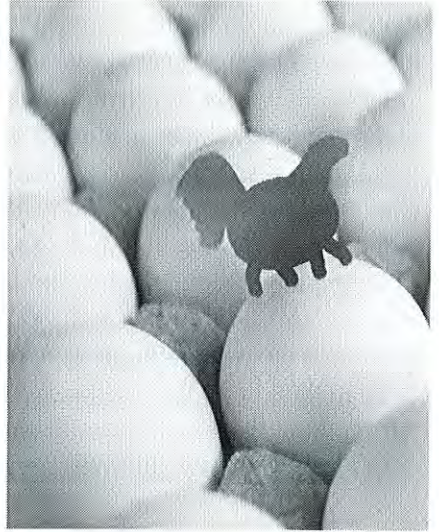

Ted: heh heh,.. good to know. Now, next question. If the middle school teachers had stricter rules, do you think it would prevent the recent Middle School-Elementary School war?

Stay tuned, for this conversation will be continued on pg.367

Flaming Longbows Replace Boffers

Recently, a new sport has been introduced into the Middle School. Students have discovered something that they claim, is better than boffing! They have found fun in using bows and arrows, setting them ablaze and shooting them at each other. When asked, Ursina, Middle School teacher, and head of the boffing crew, said "I never thought these kids could find something more fun than the boffers. It's amazing how creative kids can be. No middle schoolers have died from this new sport, however, student Dietrich Davidson was hit in the toe and set on fire. He is now in the hospital suffering serious 3rd degree burns along with...

Odd Goings-On Downstairs

Recently, there's been a rumor going around Harmony that someone (Presumably in pottery class) has created a mutant potato. It's said that the student hid the potato somewhere in Harmony's baby room. How the potato got there in the first place is unknown, but one thing is for sure: Someone left a potato in the pottery room the day before rumors started. According to people who were in the pottery class, there was a potato just randomly sitting on the shelf where students put their clay statues. No one bothered to touch it because it had green moss-like stuff on it. The next day, the potato was randomly gone, and hasn't been found since.

The same day when people discovered the potato's disappearance, multiple people were in the gym talking about how someone in a gray mask was walking around telling them that there was a potato that's going to grow and destroy the earth. The only thing we know about this person is that they're male.

To make things even stranger, most people from the middle school and k-6 don't even know about these rumors at all. It seems to mainly be people downstairs, specifically the 1st and 2nd grade, who know about the mystery of the potato. Also, students who have gone down to the baby room to look for the potato usually come out empty handed, and end up sick the next day. Because of this, the baby room is temporarily blocked off.

CONGRADUATIONS AUTUMN!!!

Conclusion: Predicting the future--that's a tough thing to do. This morning scientists report the San Andreas Fault is "locked, loaded, and ready to roll." Really?

Last night I heard from "reputable sources" that if Bernie Sanders isn't the democratic nominee for President, he'll run as an independent party. Uh huh.

It's a strange world when things get blended--A reality tv show host, multi-millionaire real estate/casino developer, channels the angst of poor white people to become a Presidential candidate. Amazing.

So, all we can do is sit back & see what happens.

I want to thank the wonderful yearbook class--June, Nick, Wendy, Griffin, Collin, Dietrich, Kali, Teagan, Ted, Shane, Jackson, Adele, Maya, Lucy, Julien, Noah, Elijah, Zoey--they made doing the class fun, which it should be. And for all the students and teachers who took up the challenge of making a prediction--thank you.

The creature below became our mascot. It represents change--June created it and as you see from the many covers we made, it traveled many miles with us.
