Introduction:

Yeah, we agree & don't give us that look! A book in a pandemic--not the the most practical idea. And the cover--what's with that? The memo I got said the theme was "The Issue Issue." Half the students did that, but no, here I go lookin' & what do I see? "The Scary Issue."

Well, it actually began as the "Spooky Issue" yep. Scarry for ECPers is spooky, so their pages were really good. But really we had already shifted to "Scary" because it was more versatile and didn't have the Halloween vibe. Ok, get to the point! Hey it gets better--now the 1st & 2nd graders start asking about drawing really scarry/violent stuff & we thought--oh oh (or something to that effect), this isn't going to work! And we went to our back-up which we really liked--The Issue Issue & we figured we'd be political, social, enviromental, technological & everything would be nice and smooth. Right, deep stuff coming from the mouths of babes.

Then the coronavirus hits & we're done, bam, students gone, school gone, the book stops in its tracks. Well, in the chaos, we managed to create a book, rough around the edges, a product of its time with distance learning and angst all over it. It is not your typical yearbook because it wasn't your typical year. But, hey, it could be a collector's issue. Marty

Memphis Ice Fishing

Middle School student Memphis Buechlein loves fishing, and on a trip to the Ice Skating rink, he simply cut a hole in the floor and cast his fishing pole. Many reacted with confusion, with fellow middle schooler Theo Dove saying “Why does he think he can catch a fish here, in a Skating Rink?” Memphis, however, made an impressive number of catches including 2 haddock, 1 bass, and 3 herring.

This coronavirus thing is going to be told for generations. I watch movies and snuggle my family and sleep downstairs. I hope the coronavirus is over soon and I'm worried it will be on my birthday. ### Lesson in Solitude

It's hard to be separated when we find comfort in unison.
we relish the company of others so much, that sometimes we forget to take a break and find relief in solitude.
I miss my friends,
the euphonious sound of melding laughter, a tap on the shoulder; I have to tell you something it's funny because while I miss them,
I also miss the presence of strangers.
the smile from an old lady at goodwill,
the bumble of college students on kirkwood, other affirmations of normalcy...
I never realized how much of my happiness stemmed from other people, how much my life synchronized with my peers.,
it's wonderful,
but maybe at times
it held me back.
now that I am alone,
my happiness has to come from me,
And it is weird,
because I wonder if it ever has.

~ a silver lining,

From Lucy, High School Student

Tales from Quarantine

I wish I could get good video of what's happening in my parking lot right now. An older teen is fishing. Seriously! There's no standing water. He's just out there practicing his casting. I'm giving him 3 stars for creativity in isolation!!

-Taylor Albright, parent

In this quarantine thing I have been losing my sanity which is making me have more mental breakdowns. I kind of have been enjoying this type of school because I can start whenever I want and I can finish whenever I want. Yesterday I actually went to my cousin's house and it was so much funner than being stuck at home 24/7 because I got to play video games with him. I have been getting toys because I am mostly at home but I have been taking my dog Claire on walks because I have nothing else to do. I have been meeting other people in the street because 1) I am walking Claire and 2) riding my bike. One of the people I didn't know who lives in the same neighborhood as me is Nyx (I think that's how you say his name). Also when Easter hit I got a lot of candy like gummy bunnies, Troll sour bits, Reese's, and chocolate bunnies.

-Miko Pritchard

My life right now is pretty different from my usual life, because I have to stay home. Some things I miss most is that I don't have any social time with my friends and sometimes there are holidays and I usually celebrate them with my family. But now we have to FaceTime. Sometimes it's hard. But sometimes it's nice because I get to stay in my PJs and I get to stay home with my cats. When all of this is done I am going to see people and hang out with my friends.

-Amina, 3rd grade

Tales from Quarantine

What I miss most is my friends. My fears and worries are that we'll get quarantined. That would mean we could not go out or take walks because police would arrest us.

The good part is people are spending more time with their family. I got to read all my DOG MAN books in three days.

I am most looking forward to seeing my friends again. Right now I'm seeing my friends on zoom.

Times are tough but we all need to try our best. Summer is coming, the virus will die!

-Maya 3rd grade

Tales from Quarantine

Setting my alarm for 8 is a tremendous luxury. I find I still need to do my normal beauty routines like putting on mascara or I feel sluggish and unproductive. I can't believe how quickly I've adjusted to the new pace of life - slowwww. It actually feels really good most of the time. Once things are back to normal (will things be normal?) it will be interesting to see what that re-adjustment is like - back to the regular routines.

...waking up early, hitting the snooze button, shower off the fatigue, making breakfasts, waking children, packing lunches, hustle, hustle, hustle out the door, teaching on my toes with as much patience and grace as I can muster, multi-tasking and putting out figurative fires all day long, meetings with colleagues and parents, shuttling children to jobs and extra-curriculars, errands, making dinner, lesson-planning-homework-checking-go-go-go until it's time to do it all over again...

I'm so happy it's spring. This would all be so much harder if it were the beginning of winter. I'm grateful to live in the woods and have wide-expanses of unpopulated acres to explore. Being outside is a blessing and a necessity. Long walks with the dog, looking at wildflowers, finding morels... those things are keeping me sane. The dog LOVES quarantine, by the way! So many walks, and her people are home all day. She's not going to know what to do when we leave her.

I miss my family and my friends immensely. I'm a pretty social person, so this is hard. Facetime and Zoom are just not the same. I have been talking on the phone a lot. I'm scared for my dad. He's 75 and has COPD. I've forbade him from leaving the house. I've brought him some care packages of books and beer and visited from the driveway a few times. We're going to do a collaborative project where I scan all our old family photos and upload them to google photos, then he adds captions telling who is in the pictures. I'm excited about that. It's nice to have more time for projects. We're building a chicken coop too. Things could be a lot worse.

-Lana Cruce, teacher

My new normal routine is getting up, doing the morning stuff for school, and then getting breakfast. Not much has changed. Simon can't come over and no one else can come over either, which is sad. But I can still hang out with my friends if we just stay 6 feet away from each other. I also learned how to hatch eggs, and a tree branch fell into the fire pit at Nic's house. I play with Simon online a lot too.

I have been live streaming a lot more frequently, and I miss my friends coming over what I miss most is... School involvement. Now it's all homework, which isn't as motivational. I miss hanging out with my peeps.

my new normal routine is... Roll out of bed, qigong, eat breakfast, feed the animals, get on zoom for the class meeting, bounce between homework and drawing or time on my tablet watching funny things. Time outside playing with the dog or helping garden.

something I've learned about myself...

what are you most looking forward to (or not looking forward to)? I'm not looking forward to it being loud at school, but I am looking forward to seeing people.

what gives you hope? Seeing that not as many people are getting sick.
what are your fears and worries? Not getting my homework done on time.

what is the silver lining? Sleeping in every morning. I can constantly be near my dog, Jabori.

how are you keeping in touch with friends and family? Class meeting is a big thing, and I'm around my family all the time.

what is working/schooling at home like for you? I just started at Harmony after homeschooling for six years, so this is like normal.

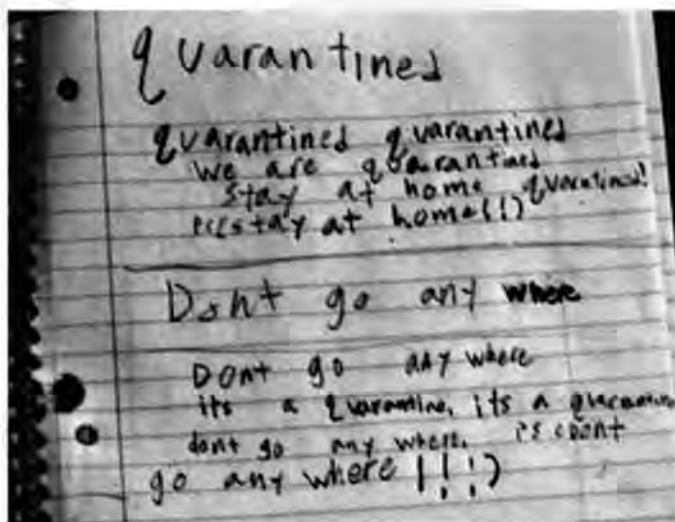

Caden Baird, 6th grade

The fact that we are stuck at home has its ups and downs. I don't like the fact that I'm not able to see my friends and all the fun field trips we had planned got cancelled but honestly it's kind of nice not having to wake up pretty early and drive to school. The only way I'm able to keep in touch with my friends is calls. It's nice that I'm able to keep in touch but again, it's not the same as seeing them. The thing I'm worried about is if covid-19 is going to come back. If it comes back even more school may be cancelled. |

Tales from Quarantine

I miss my cousin Nora the most. My new normal routine is: wake up, breakfast, play, school, play, I've learned that I get stressed when my workspace is messy. I'm looking forward to seeing my cousin Nora again. I keep in touch with my family by text or zoom. Schooling at home is OK, but not the best. I hate Coronavirus and I want to go back to school. My brothers are driving me crazy because Oliver hates me and acts like Sam is a god. We go up the hill a lot because we have woods back there. The landlord, Larry took the bison the other day so we went in the bison field because they were not there and we thought we saw baby chicks so we went in but they were actually adults. Yesterday me and my mom and Ollie went up the hill and Larry yelled at us and said: "who are you?" and my mom said oh, I'm Heather!" "oh I didn't recognise yer car!" "OK!" "I just didn't recognize yer car" he mumbled, and walked off. Before he was all the way gone Oliver said: "happy easter!!!!!!!!!!!" Larry did not look back. Mable gets off her leash a lot and it is scary. Cutie (my cat) claws at my ankles and it makes me scared of him. Mystery (my other cat) is acting weird today. I text my friends and family a lot. I play with barbies.

Thoughts on Quarantine from the Harmony Middle School

"When this is over I can say I have been through quarantine. When I have kids I am going to tell them I survived a zombie apocalypse. I think we should all do that." -Izzy

"I'm really bored" -Sebastian

"When I found out school was going to be canceled because of the virus, my first reaction was "Yay, no school!!!"- Ada

"I have been hanging out with my family more, getting in fights with them because we are trapped in a small house. Truthfully, I hate being in quarantine. It sucks and I have no one to hang out with. I can only talk to them over the phone which is pretty boring." - Willow

"What games from my childhood do I still have? Some of the games I had as a kid are either missing or broken, so I hope I find some of them to pass the time." -Noah

"The only thing that's really on my mind is getting through this pandemic, so everything can 'go back to normal'. Like going to school. Seeing my people. Getting out of the house once in a while." - Kiya

"No School in April. What Else is on my Mind?" - Asa

"Perhaps I'll help work on the deck. Maybe, while wearing a turtleneck" -Allwyn

"My great grandma passed away Thursday, March 11. The funeral was on Wednesday, March 17. We chose not to attend it in hopes that it would keep the more vulnerable people there safe." - Sierra

"Things I will do: I will definitely read. I will also eat, sleep, and may write about it because Ursina asked me to." -Nell

"I FaceTime Lyla almost everyday . Sometimes she doesn't answer but it's fine. One day, I went to her house to surprise her since our parents won't let us see each other. We talked through her window." -Kenda

"One day Kenda came to my house and since my parents won't let me hang out with anyone we got to talk through my window. I also gave her a bracelet I got her in Turks and Caicos." -Lyla

Thoughts on Quarantine from the Harmony Middle School

"I ain't got nothing to do during the quarantine, so imma play video games and eat cheese doodles till I choke and die." -Mason

"I would like to hang out with friends some time. But we are on quarantine so, when we get out of lock down." -Memphis

"School is currently not in and then we are going back in the future, but the future holds things that we cannot explain. This isn't like the flash -- we can't go to the future and see what it holds." -Kayla

"I am attempting to not pull my hair out out of boredom from not seeing anyone but my brother and my parents. I have been taking walks around the area that I live, but I still am bored out of my mind. Life under half sort of quarantine is boring. My cat is dumb, my brother is a nerd, and outside is beautiful. Thank you for reading." -Zach

"I hate not being able to see my friends. I don't have a phone because I'm grounded, which means I can no longer contact friends." -Lilly

"Wow, I can't believe this whole covid -19 thing. It's pretty stinky. I did a bit more research on the pandemic and the way it affects your body is in your lungs, It basically goes into your lung glands and hacks them almost and tells them to make more and more of the coronavirus. Then if you can't fight it off because your lungs or immune system aren't strong enough you just might die. It seems like the government is a fail and left people unprepared for this so everyone is freaking out. Hopefully we can overcome these challenges and take care of our neighbors and make it out ok." -Max

"Well, I've got 6-8 weeks of nothing but staying in my room, so I better make myself cozy. I was thinking of installing a makeshift bidet in my closet so there is no need for toilet paper because you know, I'm smart like that." -Logan

"Staying healthy-ish: Eating healthy is a good way to stay healthy. Getting all the minerals you need will keep you strong and not susceptible to germs." -Gideon

Tales from Quarantine

My life has changed a lot since the coronavirus hit Monroe County. I don't go to school, instead I do school from home. I miss my friends and being able to go places. Actually, I don't go outside at all. The reason I don't go outside is that I live in a apartment building. The silver lining is that I get to play more video games and my mom is buying a lot of stuff online for me. I play a lot more sims and roblox. I use a lot of messenger kids and skype to talk to my friends. I play a lot of animal crossing with my aunt Kari and I video chat at the same time. I'm looking forward to going on vacation to Wisconsin to see my cousins at a resort. At the resort there's a cat named Dribbles that we found there. I'm also looking forward to going places like the mall and David and Busters. Another thing that's changed is we have to wear masks in our hallway and sometimes outside. They're uncomfortable but I got used to them. The virus came from a pangolin. The pangolin ate a bat and then a human ate a pangolin and that's how the virus started. I also get to sleep in and do school whenever I want. I get to be done with school earlier and I get to take my time. I can have snacks whenever I want and I get snuggles from my kitty. My mom is pregnant during this virus. I got a game called Throw Throw Burrito. It's where there's cards and you try to get three of a kind. I got rollerblades and me and my mom went to try them but the side hurt my ankle.

Present Moment of an Unknown Breath

By: Alexia Martz, high school student March 25, 2020

I haven't breathed, yet. In despair, I sit with sorrow.

With light, I still see darkness.

I feel frightened, but awake at the same time.

I can't tell if it's because I'm getting more-and-more impatient with reality, or if it's because the world really does suck.

My heart carries more weight than usual, and my feelings are just wrapped around me -- as if I'm the center of one huge knot.

I didn't know that I could feel so awful, at such a random time, either.

Sure, I can look in the mirror and tell myself everything's okay -- but that doesn't change the fact that everything really isn't okay, and I'm just trying to protect myself with lies.

People are dying every day, because of this virus.

That's beyond- blisteringly horrible!! There are times where I feel worried, for no reason.

Or so that's what I think in such moments.

That being said,

In a way -- I believe that the reason I get such random feelings is that I feel for others.

I can feel one's pain like it's my own.

Even not knowing the person --

If I know there are tragedies happening around me,

I feel every inch of sorrow and sadness that others feel.

It's kinda scary, honestly.

Alexia Martz April 13, 2020

Almost Three weeks have passed since I last wrote about my feelings, in regards to COVID-19.

My soul still continues to wander its path of finding the right positivity.

I miss my family, I miss my friends, and I miss my teachers.

Sometimes I envisage myself walking back into school, with a huge smile on my face, and my arms wide open. -- Free hugs!!

I can see my little school-cubs running down the hallway screaming "Lexie!!!" as they jump into my arms.

Tales from Quarantine

Alexia Martz

May 3, 2020

My heart is still bruised, and my soul is still wandering.
My feet are motionless, and my eyes are tired of seeing the same thing every single day.

I'm angry, I'm emotional, I'm disgusted, and I'm full of fear.
However, somewhere wrapped within those sentiments, there is gratitude and happiness.

My happiness currently derives from early morning animal noises, coffee, and the sunshine as it periodically appears.
My sadness derives from the hurt and the loss of others, as some of us don't take things seriously.

I've had to let myself break down and cry more than I have ever before. I've let myself show anger towards others' as I watch my roses die. Because not only are my roses dying- people are too. Which, knowing this- it's okay to be angry, it's okay to be sad, and it's okay to be scared.

In fact, also know that it's okay to express your thoughts and feelings as we face such awful occurrences

Let yourself cry!! -- Because it is okay!!!

Almost every single morning when I wake up, I press my nose against my foggy window and I get just a second of excitement, thinking that the bad dream I had the night before, didn't actually happen. That excitement ends when I realize I really, truly am living that nightmare.

3/27/2020 Staying Alive

We are really going through some tough times right now. With the coronavirus and everything I've spent days staying at home and when I do get the chance to go out it's literally a ghost town wherever I go. I'm worried that I won't be able to carry on with my senior project. I only have 2 months to train and with all the pools and gyms being closed it's made it a lot harder to get out, but I'm not letting that stop me. I've been going out late at night with my dad and Judah and we would usually run for training, because it's the only thing that we can do. We may be going through some tough times and more and more people keep getting sick and dying I will not let this stop me from reaching my goal. I am trying my best to keep myself and my family safe and I have faith that things will get better. Just keep going Kobe! Don't give up and let this stop you! I know that we are living in some scary times, but it won't help if you sit here and fear that everything will go wrong. It won't! You will be able to complete your project and swim the English Channel. Have Faith! And everything will be just fine! :)
Thank you

Tales from Quarantine

the sun is shining bright today. i opened my blinds to let the sun in. the natural light makes my room feel a lot better, like i'm not so lonely anymore.

the neighbor kids are playing with their dog in the field. one of them is bouncing on a trampoline in their yard. their horse is enjoying the sun. the quarantine doesn't faze them one bit.

i hung a couple things on my wall. a few posters, a couple photographs, even the gag gift my friend gave me. they make my walls less barren and make me think back fondly on the times when i got them.

my friends are starting a music club over discord. they suggest albums and listen to them together before discussing them. they're finding and sharing new music every week.

i clean my room the other day. i dug up memories i think of fondly and memories i'd rather forget. but most of all, i found my carpet, something i haven't been able to see through the clutter in a while. my room is clear and i can't help but smile.

a few of my friends and i started up a short dnd campaign to do over discord. it's a victorian murder mystery. everybody wants to be a druid but the dm wants diversity. they come to a compromise.

my friends and i argued with each other over why we didn't turn our cameras on during the class call. we both agreed to do it next class we had together. we both joined a bit earlier than everyone else and had a good laugh about how we were both sitting in front of blank walls. they said it looked like i was in prison.

i looked in the mirror the other day before i showered. i finally saw myself for what i truly look like instead of the false standards of beauty i never met up to. i saw the way my face curved, the way my hips dipped, the way my freckles splotched my skin. i looked in the mirror and i didn't hate what i saw. my smile was full of crooked teeth, and was beautiful.

Tales from Quarantine

a new season of a podcast i enjoy is coming out soon. they released a trailer for it not too long ago. they had to make a public statement about how the season was recorded before the quarantine, and the first few episodes might feel too close to this current situation. it's an odd feeling when you hear a series meant to utilize human fear in their story apologize for hitting too close to home.

my friend showed us her cats over our class call and told us how annoyed they were with her. a kid did his makeup during the class. my teacher talked about how her dog was confused about why they weren't going anywhere. a kid changed the background on his video to a picture of our teacher. a kid ate waffles during the class. these calls managed to show me a lot of their personalities, more than any conversations i'd had with some of them.

my friend and i have a tradition of putting fruit stickers on a teachers chair whenever we can. they keep sending me videos of them putting the stickers on their wall to save for when we get back.

my sister texted me and asked if i had my old 3ds and animal crossing game still. i knew she was missing out on new horizons and was probably upset about it, so i said she could have them and make a new town if she wanted. we didn't talk long when she came to pick it up, but the simple exchange of telling her i wished her nice villagers was enough to make it worth it.

i plan to go on a walk through the woods behind our house at some point. i've only been through there once and i got covered in ticks during it. this time i have bug spray, and i plan to have a wonderful time. i hope it's more beautiful than last time.

i look through the window at the light coming in from the sun. it's such a beautiful day. i think we're all going to be okay.

Tales from Quarantine

I drew this because this quarantine leaves me a lot of time to do nothing but think. I started thinking on myself and the type of person i want to be. It's a confusing thing for everyone, and the type of person i want to be is contradictory. I want to be pretty to myself and to others, but i want people to know that i am not somebody to mess around with - that i can and will stand up for myself. I want to be the person i admire.

Documenting Experience During COVID-19 (A.K.A the daily life of a socially deprived teenager in quarantine)

Date: 3/27/2020

Days: 13

Cries: 11

Outings: 6

Outside family interactions: 2

Provisions/Supplies: High

General Morale: High

Personal Morale: Medium

Daily Activities: School, DnD, working out, drawing, and writing.

I focus on school in the morning. I enjoy the socializing part of it and that everyone is basically experiencing the same thing, so we all understand the struggles of online classes and homework. I play DnD twice a week, which is a good casual social interaction and helps my creative brain. I try to work out every day, nothing super big, just simple weight lifting and push-ups and stuff. It tends to lift my mood and makes me feel good. My writing is technically school related but it's my creative project that focuses on a group of people during an apocalypse. It's very interesting to compare and contrast the story and real life right now. For drawing, I've done a few casual drawings such as my characters from DnD or my stories. To help me keep a schedule, at 9:30PM I do the same drawing every day; a small portrait of my girlfriend. Being apart from people is very hard and I express a lot through my art, so drawing helps a lot.

I have also done a few crafts when I'm feeling very bored. I have so far made a foam sword and began work on an apocalypse book/journal, written from the perspective of a character from my apocalypse story. Neither project is complete yet. I save them for when I'm bored with all of my regular activities.

Harmony School KPOP Crew BREAKS UP in Dramatic Fashion

By Jacob Otto

The drama is simply unreal with the Harmony KPOP Crew. The group wanted a leader or “frontman”, but little did they know that would lead to the end of the Crew. Originally, Ousman thought he should be the leader because he has a solo. This was quickly vetoed by the rest of the group. As one member, who will remain nameless, put it, “I can’t believe him. He thinks he’s all that. Well, I can do the solo too but that doesn’t mean I am the leader!” The group then proceeded to compare dancing skills which “almost lead to a physical fight,” according to their manager.

The crew then announced they are taking a break from performing to work on “solo projects”. One member was quoted as saying members can’t get past “creative differences”. Another member said, “I’m planning on spending more time with my new wife, Yoko.” A third member commented, “It’s the fame that got to us. The intense fame, and all of us being really, really self-absorbed...wait, that microphone isn’t recording is it?” The Harmony School community was not surprised; most saw it coming. But still, there is a cloud of heartbreak and sadness hovering over the school.

KATHY ATTEMPTS TO SCAM PALEOCLIMATOLOGISTS

By Jacob Schmiechen

Kathy Boone, a 5th/6th grade teacher, attempted to scam a group of paleoclimatologists out of millions of dollars by selling them fake ice chunks which she claimed were dug up from deep in the ice of Antarctica and contained “fossils” of ancient animals. It was discovered pretty quickly that they were fake because the creatures trapped inside were actually plastic toys. Also, the security cameras recently installed in the 5th/6th Little Room (for unrelated reasons) captured footage of students furiously eating pringles so that Kathy could use the empty cans to make her fake ice chunks. How she got students to do this is still unknown. She also used gravel from the ECP playground and coffee to make it look more realistic. After being found out, Kathy decided to use the ice chunks for an actual science experiment.

Mother Bear's Pizza

Mother Bear's pizza has been synonymous with awards. It has won the Best Pizza in Bloomington ten years in a row and Best Local Restaurant in Bloomington twice as voted by the IU community through the IDS Best of Bloomington poll. It has also received the Best Pizza in Indiana according to USA Today and one of America's Top Nine Pizzerias according to People Magazine.

Ray McConnell, an IU graduate, has prided himself on keeping Mother Bear's close to the heart of both the Bloomington and Indiana University communities. It has been serving the students and the public since 1970.

Some of the reasons why Mother Bear's is famous are its specials and specialty pizzas. The most popular, especially among students, is the "Munchie Madness." This special includes pizza, breadsticks or cheese bread, two home-made brownies and a two liter bottle of soda.

The most famous specialty pizza is the "Divine Swine." This meat lover's fantasy has every pizza topping imaginable; pepperoni, sausage, ham and bacon. If you are feeling more on the healthy side, try the house salad that is unique for its Goldfish cracker topping instead of croutons. The restaurant is always busy and packed with patrons, but you are guaranteed that your long wait will be rewarded.

In Conclusion:

The yearbook has been one of the most enjoyable things I've done at Harmony. From the early years, pre-Photoshop, where we hand cut and laid out pages, to the present where I get to teach kids what Photoshop can do, and then they take off creating magic. And when they graduate to the actual yearbook staff, it's really fun to just knock out pages, trying to follow some crazy directions to make somebody happy. The sense of engagement, teamwork, and pure creativity is hard to beat.

So I asked Dick Vitale and my student teacher, Luke Clair-Fiko, to join me. Both are sports guys who would agree that we were underdogs in this yearbook venture. The visiting team/virus was going to try to move us off our game. Technical sophistication--ah, forget that. We'd be doing screen shots at 72dpi if we're lucky. Graphic design on a picture 1 inch by 1 inch--good luck with that. But we rallied, had some breaks--Zoom meetings, Mia Beach, home court advantage, which was debateable given a 10 year old Mac & Photoshop 9.4.

But, we dug deep, gave it 110% (& whatever other sports cliches you can conjure up). We knocked it out of the ball park. Well maybe not out of the ball park, but we got wood on the ball, and because the shortstop was trending towards third, managed to squeeze out a a base hit. Hey, small victories in times like these count. Marty
